Girl Reorganizes Hayti Community

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- The bootheel, and especially Hayti Heights and Pemiscot County, will never be the same now that a girl of Japanese birth has come there to teach the people how to live, according to claims made by a magazine published by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The girl is Marilyn Miyagawa, a junior from a California college. She came as a volunteer in VISTA.

The bootheel is described in the magazine as a "section so named because it pokes down in Arkansas like a shoe into mud."

The girl and her job was introduced this way in the magazine: Her car "spins off into a dirt road, and bumps through a place called Hayti Heights. The Heights seems a village in wee. It is a collection of frame shanties perched on Delta mud. Even under the cheerful sun the Heights is scarred with seres of deep poverty. Shanties are sprung at the seams, yards are unpaved, and fences sag. Rain water from the night before fills ditches at road sides."

But Marilyn is cheerful and is greeted by all as "honey" or by her first name. All people confide in her and ask for her help with their problems.

There are 2,500 people just outside the town, but not a part of it. One woman's trouble was she had been cut off from welfare, Marilyn pitched to help her. She "scooped" up a child to love it, found its eye infected, and made a date to take it to the clinic.

Marilyn had troubles of her own when she moved there. The best she could do was to get quarters of one room, "no stove, no refrigerator, no anything." She was refused an apartment because she was Japanese. She worked for a while at the health center, teaching women to wash their babies, and feed them, and then she was "kicked out of the center."

Then the miracles began; She organized the community, or as they say around the OEO headquarters, "that 20 year old kid who organized a whole community single handed." She got the 2,500 to form a government outside the government. They demanded more paved roads, improvements in drainage, better sanitation, a community center, and other improvements.

There was no culture except a movie now and then from Memphis, and little of anything else, besides "mud, cotton, and poverty." But the whole community has started the "climb upwards because of her."

She had three other VISTA volunteers to help her in the nearby communities, two of whom were from California also. One was a graduate at Berkeley. One was from Colorado University.

Though her job was to teach adults, she and her roommate would let the children roam their home, play games with the, tell them stories, and give them milk and cookies.

This is the story of how a 20-year-old Japanese girl completely changed the lives for the better of this bootheel town. The article can be found in the magazine "Communities in Action," published by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Pierce, Hodges Accept Iowa Junior College Jobs

CHARLESTON--The administrative team of Dr. W. R. Pierce Jr. and Bill Hodges, and superintendent and assistant superintendent, respectively, of the R-1 School District since July, 1965, have accepted positions as president and academic dean, respectively, of a junior college in Iowa.

BOTH MEN HAD previously announced other plans for the 1966-67 school year--Pierce as associate professor of education at Western Kentucky University and Hodges as superintendent of the Richland district in Stoddard County. Both men have received releases from these obligations in order to take on the junior college assignments.

The Creston Community Junior College organized in 1926 as a college transfer school, has been reorganized under an act of the Iowa legislature, into the Area XIV Vocational and Junior College. Pierce and Hodges will be concerned with developing the vocational division of the college, while maintaining its present academic facilities. The college will serve an eight-county area in southwestern Iowa.

Creston is located about 50 miles southwest of Des Moines, and is a community of 8,000 persons.

DR. PIERCE will receive a salary of $24,000 per year, and Hodges will receive $14,000.

Pierce said he and his family have enjoyed their seven years in Charleston. "We feel indebted to many people here," he said, "and will plan to visit our friends here on future trips through southeast Missouri."

Dr. Pierce said he plans to be in Creston about July 25. His family is moving today from their home on Word Avenue, and will spend the next three weeks visiting relatives while Dr. Pierce is working in Bowling Green, Ky.

Hodges plans to start work in Creston next week, and his family will move from their home on Route 3 about August 1.

Both families have purchased homes in Creston.

Indian Homesites Being Uncovered In Mississippi County Area

JIM HOPGOOD, left, viewing several particles of pottery being uncovered by John Claggett and Howard Platz, both of Shelbina. The mound excavations of former Baytime Indian culture of almost 1000 years ago is located on highway 77 and county road MM and AA.

EAST PRAIRIE -- A group of Missouri University anthropology instructors, together with college and high school students, are excavating Indian burial grounds, and former homesites.

The digging is being done southeast of East Prairie on county highway MM. The first digging was done off highway 80 on route AA.

In charge of the excavation is James Hopgood, formerly of East Prairie and now assistant associate director of anthropology, University of Missouri; Ray Williams, research associate, department of anthropology, Missouri University.

In the first excavation on the Shell Island tract, the group uncovered a number of skeletons, consisting of two adults and a child, as well as a special infant burial ground. It was observed that a special burial process was observed; the infants had objects pressed against the back of their skulls to give the skull a more flattened shape.

The new digging on route MM is to explore the homes of the old Baytown Indian culture that roamed this area many centuries ago, before the coming of the later Indian tribes.

It has been found that the Baytown culture was a peaceful agricultural tribe. The homes are found to be in a circular fashion for their large meeting places. Many types of cooking ware made of pottery have been found.

In one spot were found charred walnuts, hickory nuts, hazel nuts, and also a bit of corn. The bottoms of floor dwellings are found at a depth of from 18 to 30 inches below the surface, and was along the former Mississippi river banks of centuries ago. The sites have been covered with a black loam, and the soil type varies from a dark to a lighter texture.

Accompanying the anthropologists are students from various states, all interested in the new findings. Among them are men who are well versed in assembling broken pottery of any early period of Indian civilization, as well as one who is well versed on bone structure of the inhabitants of the varying tribes.

Students found at the excavations this week were Howard Platz, Shelbina high school biology teacher; John Claggett, Kirksville college student; John Clark, University of Texas; John Rees, University of Chicago; Bobby Rappold, Hermann; Tom Dixon, Gary Loomis and Fred Jones, all of East Prairie high school.

The excavating of the sites is taking place on the Allen Brock farm, which is farmed by Paul Haney, East Prairie. The expenses for the project is being provided by the National Park Service and land leveling salvage.

The Hoecake area was the site of numerous diggings in the past two years. Many mounds were uncovered that were burial grounds.

Some of the instructors will continue the excavation to August, while Ray Williams will return in September, and continue the work through December.

Hunter Shot In Back

ORAN -- Ernest Glastetter, 33, was shot in the back with a .12 gauge shotgun near here this morning when an unidentified Negro from Sikeston reportedly was firing at a squirrel located between the two hunters.

Glastetter was admitted for treatment of several buckshot wounds in his back at the St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau where his condition is reported as very good.

Scott County Sheriff John Dennis said that Glastetter was down in a ravine when the shooting occurred. He said a squirrel was between the two hunters. The Negro, who was on a hill above the ravine, shot the squirrel and the hunter. No charges have been filed.

A POTTERY base of a homesite is shown by Ron Ruen, Decorah, Ia., at the excavation site off of highway 77 and route MM, south of East Prairie.

New Madrid Countians Spend More in 1965

NEW MADRID -- Residents of New Madrid County were in the market place in force during the past year, according to a report on local retail store activity.

They had more money at their disposal and, apparently, they spent it freely.

As a result, most retail outlets were able to report solid gains over the previous year.

The facts and figures, listing and amounts spent locally for cars, food, furniture, clothing and other goods, some from the Standard Rate and Data Service. Its nationwide survey, just released, gives comparable date for each area of the country.

In New Madrid County, it shows, a large part of the consumer dollar went to stores selling food and automotive equipment. Between them they accounted for 31 per cent of all local retail business.

The breakdown reveals that food sales alone, in bakeries, meat markets, delicatessens, supermarkets and such, amounted to $5,032,000.

This sum, which represented 18 per cent of all retail activity locally, was solely for food purchased for use at home. It does not include the amount that was spent for outside eating and drinking.

The retail food sales in New Madrid County were at the rate of $696 per family, an average obtained by distributing the total outlay equally among the local population.

The market for cars and related automotive equipment was also strong, according to the report. These products, including motorcycles and bats, attracted a sizeable part of the consumer dollar.

The amount spent in this direction added up to $3,368,000 in the year, compared with the prior total of $3,114,000.

Good sales volumes were recorded, also, by other kinds of retail establishments.

Those selling general merchandise -- department stores and variety shops -- reported a $1,269,000 total.

Outlets for wearing apparel, such as hats, shoes, dresses and other items of clothing grossed $1,371,000.

Local stores handling furniture, household equipment and home furnishings, chalked up $1,156,000 in sales.

New Support on Way for Area Wheat Farmers

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — Increased coverage, averaging 19 per cent, and a new premium discount plan for Missouri wheat farmers in 1967 were announced today by the Federal Crop Insurance Corp.

F. Reed Grainer, Missouri director for FCIC, said the increased wheat coverages are the result of an adjustment based on normal yield increases in the past 10 years due to technical improvements in farming.

He said substantial coverage increases have been set for all of the 47 counties where the wheat insurance program is in effect. In addition, nine counties have been made eligible for the 1967 crop year. They are Boone, Clinton, Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Platte, Randolph and Stoddard.

Grainer saw under the premium discount feature, policyholders who do not experience a loss for one year will be granted a five per cent premium discount for the second year. Previously, policyholders had to have a three-year good experience rating before receiving a discount.

He said the same discount feature also will apply to other crops-corn, tobacco, grain sorghum, soybeans and cotton.

This year the FCIC is providing crop insurance for more than 7,500 farmers in Missouri.

BELLS ON INDEPENDENCE DAY!

This year there will be many four-year-old Americans ringing bells on July Fourth, who will grow up believing that this was always the custom. Actually it was, from the first Independence Day till about a century ago when the sounds of peace were drowned out by the noise of war, and the day became celebrated only with firecrackers and rockets.

Writing a book a few years ago, the author unearthed the story about Independence Day bell-ringing, and he mentioned that "it seems with firecrackers disappearing we might well revive that early American custom." The idea quickly took hold, supported by organizations and churches and newspapers, it reached millions of people. In 1963 it was passed in Washington as Senate Concurrent Resolution 25, requesting that all American bells, public and private, church, school, fire, college and town bells ring simultaneously at 2 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time on July Fourth. Some places now ring bells for two minutes, others for four minutes along with many radio, TV programs, and even public loudspeakers in parks, racetracks, ball games and on ships at sea.

For the past three years the "Bells on Independence Day" project has been included in Governors' Fourth of July Proclamations, and this holiday which was losing much of its solemn significance, was rekindled into a day of bells ringing out America's birthday, just as it was in the beginning.

It has been said that a thing must be done four times before it becomes a habit, so this fourth year, for the revival of the early American custom of ringing bells on Independence Day, is a most important one. Perhaps there will be no great bells within reach of your hearing, perhaps you will seem to be the only one ringing a small handbell; but you will know that all over the nation in every state, millions of bells will be ringing out the message of democracy and liberty.

A safer and less noisy pastime for children, let them ring bells on this day, proclaming it America's Birthday. And wherever we are, let us remember this greatest of American days with joy and reverence.

FOURTH OF JULY

The traditional Fourth of July our fathers and their fathers knew has largely gone from the land. Fireworks, save for organized, licensed displays, have been widely outlawed on grounds of safety. With them have gone the orations, once commonly held in town squares and fairgrounds in which leaders in government and enterprise paid their tributes to those who founded the nation, and who gave us the powers of mind and spirit which made possible the maintenance of our freedoms and the creation of material abundance.

These orators, needless to say, were often naive and flamboyant. But still, there was a profound merit in what they said and meant no matter how inept the choice of words might have been. They did paint a picture of the American ideal, the American philosophy, the American tradition. And even those who stayed but briefly to hear them felt stirrings of pride in our heritage.

All this is gone or generally so. The Fourth has become just one more holiday. And something vital, something that was at the heart of things, has gone out of the American life.

It needs to be restored if we are to save this nation from lethargy and cynicism within, as well as from our enemies without. And it can be -- if, on this and every Fourth, we give a quiet moment to reflecting on the values our forebearers brought for us with blood and treasure. We must determine to do all we can to defend those values and pass them on, untarnished, to our children and our children's children.

Every woman who "jaws" a man is a fool. Women cannot control men in that way. A Sikeston woman took a wreck of a man, and made a good citizen out of him. We know another Sikeston wife whose husband was drifting off. She set about to save him. She did it, and he loves her now as he should. She never spoke a cross word to him. It is easy to be a blackguard, but it requires genius to be a lady.

FRANCE'S BOMB

Speculation in Paris places the first in a new series of tests of the French atomic bomb on Saturday (July 2).

FOR MORE THAN A YEAR the word has been given out that France would test its first hydrogen bomb southeast of Papeete, capital of Tahiti, in July 1966. Now the predictions are zeroing in on Saturday, providing conditions are right.

Speculation was heightened on June 24, when France's minister for overseas territories, Gen. Pierre Billotte, flew from Paris for Papeete. He was to leave after a few days in the capital of Tahiti for a tour of Pacific possessions of the French. Paris Presse said the General would go to Mururoa in the Tuamotu Archipelago, 800 miles east of Tahiti, which is to be the site of the new series of bomb tests.

President Charles de Gaulle, now in the Soviet Union, is also expected to observe one of the tests. He is reported to be planning to stop off on a projected trip to Cambodia in the autumn.

THE FRENCH NUCLEAR CAPACITY is more embarrassing to France's allies than ominous. France is officially a member of the 18-nation United Nations Disarmament Committee which has been meeting for so long in the Palais des Nations in Geneva. However, France has taken no part in the deliberations there.

Neither France nor Red China is party to the existing test ban agreement. President de Gaulle has insisted on building a French nuclear force de frappe (striking force) on the ground that "American nuclear power does not necessarily meet all the eventualities concerning Europe and France."

The now moribund American proposal for a multilateral North Atlantic Treaty Organization nuclear force of missile-bearing ships was scorned from the beginning by De Gaulle. The French President saw it as an Anglo-American scheme to thwart France's national nuclear program. Whether by design or not, De Gaulle's policy of national independence has clashed with American foreign policy in almost every part of the world. De Gaulle's goal, reiterated time and again, is a free and independent Europe that could act as a counterbalance to the Soviet and American superpowers.

In this country there is a great tendency to charge all of NATO's shortfallings to De Gaulle. But as recently as May 24, Alexandre Sanguinetti, the French Minister of Veterans Affairs, charged that the United States balked all French attempts to have NATO reformed. "Our ambassador tried to broach the subject," Sanguinetti said, "but we ran up against not only a brick wall but absolute silence."

DE GAULLE has openly expressed dissatisfaction with NATO since his return to power in 1958. In September of that year he proposed in letters to British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and U. S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles that France, Britain, and the United States become a formally constituted NATO "political directorate." The scheme was turned down rather promptly, and since then De Gaulle has gradually disengaged France from the Atlantic Alliance.

In any realistic sense, the French nuclear potential, as contrasted with that of either of the atomic superpowers, must be viewed as something like the ability of a bee to sting an elephant. However, stampedes have been caused by smaller events than stings, and so long as the capacity does exist, it has to be viewed as part of De Gaulle's grand strategy, which can be described, depending on the point of view, as grandeur or chantage -- blackmail.

IN THE NEWS

The symbol "14 (b)" is destined to play a leading part in the news of the near future. It is the designation given to the section of the Taft-Hartley Act which authorizes the states, if they so wish, to pass Right-To-Work laws.

These laws simply say that it is up to each worker to decide for himself whether he wishes or does not wish to join a union. If he decides not to join, he cannot be discharged from his job for that reason. Coercion cannot be applied by either the union or the employer.

On the side of public policy, the laws honor freedom of association --the freedom of any person to join or not join a club, a civic group, a political organization or anything else. And the right to join or not join a union is certainly more basic than any of these.

On the purely practical side, Right-To-Work makes for better, more effective unions. They must sell themselves to the membership on the basis of service, instead of a basis of compulsion. A good union has no difficulty in enlisting members-- it provides a dollar's worth of return for each dollar of dues. Only the indifferent, ineffective or corrupt union needs to fear "14 (b)".

YOU MEAN -----
DRIVE SAFELY?

The latest plan for solving the transportation problem and relieving highway traffic jams is to have people ride in their own cars ON A TRAIN.

How about THAT?

The federal government is working with railroads on the scheme and it will be tested soon between New York and Chicago.

If it clicks, motorists will catch the train at rail yards in the outskirts of cities. They will drive their cars up ramps onto two-decker rail-cars, stay in their autos and leave the driving to Gus, the train engineer.

The cost will be less than 10 cents a mile. Only the driver pays. The rest of the family rides free.

The backers are concerned lest auto passengers be tummy-troubled by the roll and sway of the train. But they must realize this is not the only problem.

What they actually have to whip are such toughies as:

. What fun will it be to go 85 miles an hour if you're not exceeding the speed limit?

. How is the backseat driver going to get the message to the locomotive engineer that he's a clod at the throttle?

. How can the family turn around and go back home to make sure mom really did turn off the electric iron?

O.K., O.K., so maybe I'm going a little fast. You want you should be on Social Security before we get there? And pipe down, you kids. You had your chance when we stopped back there. Wow -- look at that idiot trying to pass us! O.K., mister, you asked for it. How do you like .....

But that's how Francis Barry became a millionaire.

At 58, self-made as any man can be, he is a major power on the New York waterfront. He is the president and chief owner of three shipping companies —the Circle Line, which carries sightseers around Manhattan; the Statue of Liberty ferry, and the famed Old Hudson River Day Line.

"Last year our 15 vessels carried about 2½ million passengers," said Barry, not without pride. That's almost three times as many as entered or left the port of New York by sea.

Son of a stevedore who finally achieved an Irish immigrant's dream of glory by buying his own saloon, Barry was born and raised here in Hell's Kitchen where a lad to survive had to be quick on his feet and fast with his fists.

"We never had any money," he said, "but since the neighbors weren't too well-heeled it didn't matter. I suppose we were poor but didn't know it.

"We lived in an old cold-water tenement that's still standing. Every Saturday morning a man would come out of the barber shop downstairs and throw 20 or 30 pennies in the air. "What a scramble! That was the big day of the week for us kids."

Barry isn't a high school dropout. He never got that far. He reached his educational peak at 13, when he finished parochial school.

"I played Abraham Lincoln in the graduation play, was elected president of the class, and ran the 75- and 100-yard dash," he recalled.

"I had a scholarship to high school but felt I couldn't afford to take it."

Barry, who had been pushing trunks part-time through the clothing district since he was 10, felt he was in clover when he landed a $12-a-week job as a messenger for the U. S. Customs Service.

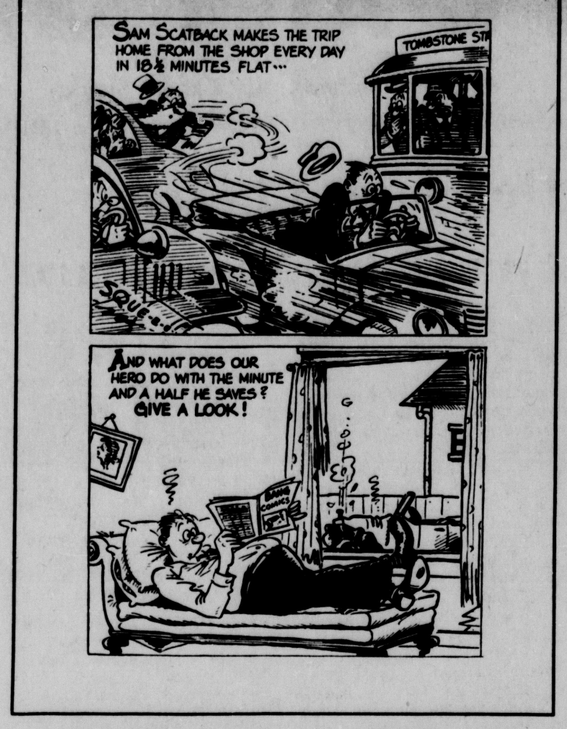

But 10 years later he had worked up to $100 a month. Neighbors thought he was out of his mind when he left the government payroll to work for a customs brokerage firm.

In a few years, Barry became a partner and then sole owner of one of the largest customs brokerage firms in the nation representing some 33 steamship lines. He surprised others in the field by taking in three partners and giving them a 49 per cent interest in the firm.

"It pays to keep good men with you," he remarked. "That's better than having to compete against them."

McNAMARA: U.S. SOUL-SEARCHER

In Montreal, speaking before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, he roamed over such matters as the real bases for peace in this world, the uses of military and economic power, the challenge of the merging nations, bridge-building between us and China.

He endorsed the idea that the inequities of the present Selective Service system be remedied by asking every young person to give one or two years of service to his country in some capacity.

The man who his critics allege has a computer where his heart should be waxed philosophical over the nature of man:

". . . a rational animal -- but with a near infinite capacity for folly . . . He draws blueprints for Utopia but never quite gets it built. In the end, he plugs away obstinately with the only building material really ever at hand: His own part-comic, part-tragic, part-cussed but part-glorious nature."

These are not the words of an unfeeling efficiency expert. Nor are these:

In Pittsburgh a few days later, McNamara said something that should be posted on the wall of every classroom in the country:

"Let us be perfectly clear about our principles and our priorities. This is a nation in which the freedom of dissent is absolutely fundamental."

Even as he spoke, anti-Viet Nam war pickets marched and chanted outside the building.

Can anyone imagine the secretary's counterpart in the Kremlin, or anywhere else in the Communist world, talking in this manner about war and peace, the nature of man, the necessity of dissent? For that matter, can anyone imagine the picketing?

It is good to criticize ourselves for our collective faults and failings, to expose our mistakes and constantly reassess the direction of our policies and programs -- in short, never to cease our national soul-searching.

But we also need to be reminded once in a while that there IS funamental difference between totalitarian and democratic societies. It is a difference measured by the ideals each society cultivates, the degree of human liberty each affords, the demands for informed responsibility each makes on its citizens, the scope for the realization of individual aspirations each allows.

Not least of all, it is a difference that is apparent in the type of leaders each produces and the kind of words they can say.

Thank you, Mr. McNamara for reminding us. Now, about the mess in Viet Nam .....

SOUTH IS DRESSIER

There's Good News from the popular winter resorts in Florida and the Caribbean. While there has been no diminishing of the effort to be casual and comfortable while vacationing in the South, there's less of the beachcomber look-- and much more of the sports-wear-dress up look than ever before. Inasmuch as these resorts are usually a testing ground for the clothes you will be offered next summer, the aforementioned change is significant and welcome.

"A MAJORITY ONCE KNEW THE WORLD WAS FLAT"

The Supreme Court decision holding that all state legislatures--the upper as well as the lower houses--must be apportioned solely on the basis of population hit the states like a bombshell. And it is going to keep on exploding for a long time to come.

For all of our history, it has been common for the states to apportion their House of Representatives on a population basis and their Senates on a geographical basis, such as by counties. In this they have simply followed the federal system, as laid down in the Constitution, in which each member of the lower house represents about the same number of constituents, while every state is allowed two Senators without regard to population.

Unless this court decision is negated--and a constitutional amendment, apparently, is the only way to do that--the big centers of population will almost completely dominate state government, at the expense of the rural areas and rural people. Their problems and needs, which often are different from those of the cities, will be submerged and their voices largely stilled. A braking power on the excesses of numerical majorities will be lost.

The argument for this revolutionary reapportionment is that the majority should rule. Washington columnist Patrick Fox had something impressive to say about that: "If a simple majority were always right, there would be no problem in letting it vote its way immediately on everything.

"But a majority once knew the world was flat. A majority opposed the American revolution."

H. L. Hunt Says

TWO CENTURIES OF AMERICAN LIBERTY

The Fourth of July this year will bring us to just ten years from the end of the second century of American Liberty, the bicentennial of our national independence. Let us hope that it will be honored with all the joy, the pageantry and the ceremony that it deserves, and that discerning men will by then have no cause to fear that our liberty may be destroyed from within.

The awareness and celebration of the great events in its heritage is vital to preserving our nation or any nation. This is an age when more and more confused persons ask: Why am I here? What can I do? What is the purpose of my country in the world? A knowledge and honoring of our proud history can help answer those questions, sounding what Abraham Lincoln called "the mystic chords of memory."

The American Revolution, which gave us our liberty, was not only a pivotal but a unique event in all history. No other nation was ever deliberately created at a given time and place, by men of profound wisdom, to give the greatest possible degree of freedom to the individual. In other countries which have known freedom, it was won only gradually over the centuries in long, bitter struggle. To us it was given full-blown.

Already we have passed through the two hundredth anniversary of one of the great events leading to the American Revolution; the repeal of the Stamp Act. Yet it has hardly been mentioned to the public. If we forget our history, then history will assuredly in time forget us. HLH

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Senate Racket Committee and FBI Zero In On New Bomb and Gun Terror Inside Labor.

Washington, D. C.: -- Drumbeats of bullets, burning of cars, brass knuckle beatings, truly brutal bullying of businessmen and now the bombing of two clean - cut Chicago unionists are tracing a bloody pattern of violence inside labor across the U. S.

At least 10 union officials - or rank and filers who have dared to dig up the muck -- have been murdered or mauled and mayhemed.

For years, until recently, this gruesome violence has been dormant as racket probe followed racket probe.

But now it's business as it usually was. Senator McClellan's investigators, burdened by other backbreaking probes, understaffed and underfinanced, nonetheless are looking into the lethal epidemic of killings and terror inside some of the nation' least publicized but most powerful unions.

What has angered the Senator and his staff is the sadistic bombing in Chicago of a car owned by Dominic Abata, head of the taxi division of Paul Hall's Seafarers' International Union.

It was the old Chicago business of dynamite wired in under the hood of the auto. Young Joe Longmeyer, a clean - cut kid doing a public relations job for what is known as DUOC -- Democratic Union Organizing Committee -- started the car, set off the blast. At least one leg was horribly mangled. The other man in the car is one of Paul Hall's field organizers.

It is no secret that husky Paul Hall, international president of the seafarers, has long fought the mobs in the big cities, along the waterfronts, and over in Puerto Rico.

He is the AFL-CIO vice-president with the guts and physical stamina to make the fight. And it may yet make him president of the AFL-CIO, which has real need of his brand of fearless vibrancy.

It was Paul Hall who directed the fight which took 6,000 Chicago taxi drivers from the hands of Joey Glimco's Teamster Local 777. The men drive for the Yellow and Checker Cab Companies.

"Little Joey" is a tough man with a record of 36 arrests. And not the least of his notoriety springs from sworn testimony before the McClellan Senate Rackets Committee to the effect that he is one of the 19 rulers of syndicate crime in Chicago.

It is the hallmark of Paul Hall's courage that this seafarers' chief has gone into Chicago regularly to do battle.

He was there as recently as a month ago, holding public hearings inside the DUOC to air grievances; writing letters to the hackies asking them to come forward with complaints; building a democratic structure in a bloody swamp.

Since then he has returned to his Brooklyn headquarters, and now is in Washington to fight for a larger American merchant marine.

And two of the men he left in the field have been bombed. He makes no accusation. He has not asked for help from the federal government.

Nonetheless, squads of FBI men zeroed in on the bombing area within an hour after the blast had hurled the two crusaders onto the grim Chicago street.

The Justice Dept. and the FBI want to take a "long look at this entire thing in Chicago." That's the way they put it.

No one is accusing anyone of anything. That's definite.

What the Justice Dept. wants to know, and what the FBI is probing and what Senator McClellan's men are seeking, is "the why" of some of Chicago labor.

Here it is 1966 and a Joey Glimco still is head of a teamsters union -- Local 777. He is active in teamster politics. He has influence in allied unions there. He has affected the dispatch of delegates to the teamsters' Miami Beach Convention. He is the object of the Grand Jury investigation.

An atmosphere has been perpetrated and perpetuated. People hearing of bombings yawn. It's all like a movie flashback to the twenties and thirties. It's no one labor man's fault, and it's everyone's fault that labor itself has not gone in and cleaned up.

Now there will be new trials and new racket hearings. And there will be outcries from inside labor.

But what of the cries of pain of those cut down, of those with shattered legs and of those helpless in the tourniquet of terror?

Washington Merry- Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Democracy may be bogging down in many parts of the world, but in the highest country of the Western Hemisphere -- Bolivia-- it is thriving.

This weekend, Bolivia is holding presidential elections on a slam-bang truly Democratic basis, with every village in the isolated Altiplano, some of them 13,000 feet above sea level, getting a chance to vote.

Especially significant is the fact that the former president of Bolivia, Gen. Rene Barrientos, who seized power in November, 1964, has stepped down from office and is taking his chances with every other candidate on reelection.

Barrientos has taken a leaf from the North American campaign methods, has hired a Fairchild helicopter, and is visiting villages which have never seen helicopters before, let alone a presidential candidate.

He faces a battery of big-name opponents from every walk of Bolivian political life. They are:

VICTOR ANDRADE, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, and longtime Ambassador in Washington where he won many friends. Andrade is running on the MNR (National Revolutionary Movement) ticket, which represents the former government.

GEN. BERNARDINO BILBOA-RIOJA, who represents the Falange or socialist party.

FELIPE INGUEZ, candidate of the Communist party.

A total of 1,200,000 Bolivians are registered to vote, the largest number in history, and the candidates for the senate and assembly include a cross section of tin miners, peasants and Indians.

Gen. Barrientos took over when President Paz, a former school teacher, made the mistake of running for a third term, in violation of the Bolivian constitution. Paz had been a good president during his first term, lost popularity in his second term, then changed the constitution so he could run for a third term. That finished him.

Barrientos studied under the U. S. Air Force at Maxwell Field, Ala., and Rantoul Field, Ill. There, he saw something of American democracy at work, and back in Bolivia he is trying to hold completely free and fair elections.

The Bolivian elections, together with the recent free and fair election in the Dominican Republic, constitute important pluses for democracy in the Americas.

POLITICAL TOLERANCE

Col. Jack Arvey, onetime political boss of Chicago, telephoned David Lawrence, ex-governor of Pennsylvania, the other day to ask: "Can a Jew be elected governor of Pennsylvania?"

Arvey referred to the campaign of Milton Shapp, who has been nominated as the democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania.

Lawrence, a Democrat and the first Catholic governor of Pennsylvania in history, knows something of the problems of racial intolerance in a political campaign. He replied: "I think he can."

Lawrence went on to tell Arvey of the tremendous impression Shapp made on Catholic voters in the democratic primary, even though Shapp was running against a Catholic candidate, Robert Casey.

"He put on a documentary film telling about his life," Lawrence said. "He covered everything. It took him from a young Jewish boy in the slums of Cleveland to the building up of his electronics company. It was a real American success story."

Lawrence told how a straw vote had been taken at Cathedral high school in Pittsburgh, a Catholic school, and how Shapp had carried it against Casey.

In the democratic primary the democratic organization had been opposed to Shapp and for Casey. Nevertheless, Lawrence pointed out that not one county chairman, mayor or congressman in charge of the organization campaign had been able to carry the Catholic and Protestant districts. They were carried by Shapp, a Jew.

Though Shapp was critical of the democratic machine during his campaign, he has now come to Washington to meet with Lawrence, had breakfast with Mayor Joseph Barr of Pittsburgh and is bringing dissident elements of the democratic party together.

Shapp is running against Republican Raymond Shafer, now lieutenant governor. The race is so hot that the politicians are wisecracking: "Shafer will have to go to California to take lessons from Ronald Reagan."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rep. Charles Farnsley, D-Ky., the ex-mayor of Louisville, has offered Ralph Nader, the auto safety expert, one of the new administrative assistant jobs recently created by the house. Nader gratefully turned it down. Too many writing and speaking commitments . . . People are wondering why the army chose the front of the Jefferson Memorial to demonstrate tough judo - like war tactics. It's true that Jefferson once said: "The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants. It is its natural manure." But on the whole he was a peaceful man.

Broader Lunch, Milk Measures Win Support

WASHINGTON (AP)—A broad expansion of the federal school lunch and milk programs won unanimous backing of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Chairman Allen J. Ellender, D-La., worked out a compromise with Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman which will permit a two-year test of a new school breakfast program.

It also will permit use of federal funds for the first time to help pay local costs for food preparation, storing and serving equipment in needy school districts previously unable to share in the nationwide lunch and milk programs.

The pilot school breakfast programs would be limited to two years with $7.5 million the first and $10 million the second.

Both the House and a Senate appropriations sub committee have rejected President Johnson's efforts to cut back the programs by several million dollars in the fiscal year which begins Friday.

The President asked a reduction from $103 to $21 million in the milk fund; but the Senate bill would authorize up to $110 million next year, $115 million for the second period and $120 million for the following two years.

Whitfield Becomes A Twin Killer

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The 28-year-old Cleveland first baseman has rifled 20 hits in 44 tries in 11 games against Minnesota this season. His 1966 batting mark against New York, the team he has tormented since coming into the American League four years ago, is only .235.

Whitfield gunned three hits, including a two-run homer, and right-hander Steve Hargan fired blanks as the Indians scalped the Twins 4-0 Thursday.

In the only other AL games, league-leading Baltimore downed Kansas City 11-3 and Boston edged the Yanks 3-2.

In the National League, San Francisco beat Atlanta 3-1, Pittsburgh routed Houston 9-0 and Philadelphia defeated the New York Mets 1-0.

Whitfield, whose season's batting average is only .250, walloped his 12th homer after Chico Salmon singled in the eighth to clinch the Indians' victory. Earlier, Whitfield had singled home Jim Landis in the first inning, then singled and scored Cleveland's second run in the fourth.

Hargan, making only his third start of the year, allowed only one Minnesota runner to reach second. He struck out 10 and walked none. Jim Perry was the losing pitcher.

The Orioles collected 19 hits, including eight doubles, in crushing the A's and boosting their AL lead to four games over idle Detroit.

Baltimore roughed up Ralph Terry, Kansas City's starter, for three runs on five hits, including doubles by Frank Robinson and Luis Aparicio, in the opening inning and never were headed.

Carl Yastrzemski and Don Demeter were the latest Yankee killers. Yastrzemski doubled and scored on Demeter's single in the seventh inning, breaking a 2-2 tie for the Red Sox.

The Yanks had taken a 1-0 lead in the second and picked up another run in the fourth on Joe Pepitone's 14th home run. Boston tied it in the fifth and shelled Jim Bouton on an error, Rico Petrocelli's single, a fielder's choice, Yastrzemski's double and an infield hit by George Scott.

The victory went to Don McMahon, who checked the Yankees in the final three innings after Jim Lonborg was lifted for a pinch hitter in the sixth. Hal Reniff took the loss.

Yankee slugger Mickey Mantle, who had hammered two homers in each of the two previous games, walked three times and flied out in his other two trips.

Tragedy Strikes Two Race Car Drivers

Saner, secretary of the Cape Girardeau Stock Car Association, has been advised that Durrell Fowler, Portageville, had been injured while driving at the Portageville race track, having received 50 per cent burns to the body, slight brain concussion and a fractured leg. Mr. Fowler, driver of car No. 15 in A Class, is the top standing leader at Cape Raceways.

Another driver, Harl Dean Prior, Benton Ill., died Monday at a Blytheville, Ark., hospital following injuries sustained at the Blytheville race track on June 19. Mr. Prior had also participated in races at Cape Raceway, driving car No. 11. He was 25 years old, and is survived by his wife, Shirley.

All Stars To Compete In All-Star Game

ST. LOUIS AP -- The St. louis Globe - Democrat announced Thursday that starting Dec. 3 it plans to sponsor an annual Missouri high school All-Star football game for charity in the Busch Memorial Stadium.

The paper said that in November members of its sports staff and other football experts would select 33 players for each team, the North Missouri and the South Missouri All-Stars.

North players will come from areas above Highway 40 from the Mississippi River west to the Missouri River and then the Missouri River westward. South players will be chosen from cities below the dividing line.

The first game will benefit the Salvation Army.

The Globe-Democrat said it had received permission to hold the game from the Missouri State High School Activities Association. The paper said they will adhere to all regulations on eligibility.

Cards Sign Two

Don Cooksey, one of the top young ballplayers in the St. Louis area, has been signed to a minor league contract by the Cardinals, it was announced today by Director of Scouting George Silvey.

Cooksey, who pitched and played the outfield for O'Fallon Tech, is being assigned to Sarasota, Florida, of the Gulf Coast League.

Cooksey, an 18-year-old 200-pounder, was scouted by Joe Monahan and George Hasser. The 6-foot, 3-inch athlete is rated as having a "great arm, excellent power and size." He is considered as having a chance to make good at either position.

Monoahan, in his report said that Cooksey "has the arm to make him an outstanding pitcher, and the swing and power to become an outstanding hitter."

The Cardinals also signed Samuel Charles Stewart, an outstanding athlete at Oklahoma Baptist University, to a contract with their Sarasota club of the Gulf Coast League, it was announced by Director of Scouting George Silvey.

Charley Stewart lettered in baseball, basketball and track at Oklahoma Baptist, had a three-year college batting average of .397, and stole 80 bases in 70 games.

In track, he ran the 100-yard dash in 9.6 seconds, and had a mark of 23 feet, 9 inches in the broad jump. He was a member of the OBU team which won the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Championship this past season.

Scout Fred Hawn, who signed him, reports that he has timed Stewart going to first base in as fast as 3.4 seconds on a bunt, and 3.8 and 3.9 seconds after a full swing.

Joe Medwick to Tour Cardinal Minor Leagues

Joe Medwick, who worked as a hitting instructor in the Cardinals' Minor League Spring Training Camp, is going to get a chance to see how his students are making out.

Medwick, according to an announcement by Cardinal General Manager Bob Howsam, is going to tour the Red Birds' Minor League Clubs to observe and instruct some of the St. Louis Club's prospects.

Medwick will start work this week-end, according to Sheldon (Chief) Bender, Director of Cardinal Minor League Clubs. He will visit Tulla, Little Rock, Cedar Rapids, Rock Hill, St. Petersburg and Sarasota. In all, he will spend two months with the Cardinal teams.

The 55-year-old Medwick, a top candidate for baseball's Hall of Fame, had a .324 batting average for 17 big league seasons, most of them with the Cardinals. In 1937, he was National League batting champion with .374, the runs batted in leader with 154 and the Most Valuable Player. He hit over .300 in 14 of his 17 seasons.

Suggested Melody

The national anthem of the United States, "The Star-Spangled Banner," was first printed as a poem. Judge J. H. Nicholson, brother-in-law of Francis Scott Key, suggested that the poem should be sung to the tune of an old English drinking song, "To Anacreon in Heaven."

George Dean Named Head Football Coach At Malden High School

Dean was a star fullback for the Hayti Indians during his high school days and attended SeMo State College at Cape Girardeau. He has been head coach at Hayti for the past three years.

Mrs. Dean will also teach in the Malden schools as a kindergarten instructor.

Medicare Answers You Need to Know

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are answers to some of the questions most frequently asked about medicare, starting today for all Americans 65 and older:

Q. If the hospital I choose is overcrowded, does medicare guarantee me a bed?

A. No. Medicare just helps pay the bill.

Q. If I have to go back into the hospital two or more times, do I pay the $40 "deductible" each time?

A. No. You pay just the first $40 of hospital charges in each "spell of illness."

Q. What's a "spell of illness."

A. To medicare it's a period of time, not an ailment. It starts the day you enter a hospital. It ends 60 days after your discharge from the hospital. Or from a nursing home — after next Jan. 1, medicare will provide posthospital convalescent care in nursing homes for those needing it.

Q. Suppose I go back to the hospital for a different sickness?

A. To medicare it doesn't matter. It's all one "spell of illness" if the new admission comes within 60 days of the last discharge.

Q. Do I have to go back to the same hospital?

A. No. Your benefits follow you from hospital to hospital and from city to city. Just show your red, white and blue card. Any participating hospital can tell instantly, by check to a computer in Baltimore, Md., whether you have used up all your "benefit days."

Q. If I'm in a hospital when medicare starts, does medicare pick up the bill?

A. Not for past days. Medicare picks up as of July 1, and you'll still have to pay the $40 deductible as well as the charges for the days preceding medicare.

Q. I've signed up to pay $3 a month for the voluntary doctor bill insurance. It has a $50 deductible; how often do I have to pay that?

A. Just once each year, regardless of how much your doctor bills add up to in a year.

Q. Should I cancel my old health insurance policy?

A. If you are 65 but your wife is not, she's not covered by medicare. You may want to keep her policy in force.

Q. We are both over 65. Should we buy the "supplemental" plans offered to over-65 persons by Blue Cross, Blue Shield and other private insurers for additional protection?

A. That depends on your own needs and inclinations. Some policies are designed to cover medicare's "deductibles" and provide benefits beyond the limits of medicare. Another type of policy pays off in cash benefits for each day of hospitalization; the money could be used for the inevitable costs of an illness, or for "extras," such as a bedside telephone or a private room instead of the semiprivate accommodations paid for by medicare.

Q. Medicare's doctor bill insurance covers 80 per cent of a doctor's "reasonable charges," after the $50 deductible. Does the doctor send his bill to medicare or to me?

A. Either one. He can send it to medicare's local "intermediary" agency — in most cities, the local Blue Shield organization — which will pay him 80 per cent of what it deems a "reasonable charge" for his treatment or operation; the other 20 per cent would come for you. Or he could send the whole bill directly to you.

Q. In the latter case what do I do?

A. Pay it, then apply for reimbursement to the "intermediary."

Federal Grants Paid out for Widening Variety of Uses

By MARTHA COLE

WASHINGTON (AP)—A sabbatical leave for a college art teacher, research on a strawberry disease, a study of cancer drugs, a job for a school dropout, a new park in Honolulu.

For these, and scores of others each day, there are federal grants in aid.

Announcements from the federal departments and agencies show the interest in the cultural life, a beautiful America, space, the poor, the elderly, the handicapped, the jobless, education. The list goes on.

The government spends billions in grants each year. They go to states, counties, communities, colleges and research institutions. Generally, they are matched by local funds, sometimes 50-50. Sometimes the government pays two-thirds or three-fourths.

A check of one day—last Wednesday — on announcements from government agencies about grants turned up this sampling: The Department of Housing and Urban Development announced grants of almost $134 million to help urban mass transportation projects. Example: Cleveland got almost $7 million for an extension to its airport.

The department granted $554,091 to Honolulu for parks in the city's urban renewal projects.

The National Endowment for the Arts approved up to 50 sabbatical leave grants of $7,500 each for teaching artists in colleges and universities.

The Department of Agriculture made a $115,000 grant to Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research, Inc., Yonkers, N.Y., for a four-year study of resistance of strawberries to red stele disease.

The Public Health Service announced it has committed more than $2 million for the next five years for research at Yale University School of Medicine on how cancer drugs work.

The Commerce Department had grants to help build vocational schools, sewage plants, a town library and a community hospital.

And up at the Capitol, the Senate Agriculture Committee voted to expand the grants for the school lunch program, while the House Rules Committee cleared for floor action the grants of the antipoverty program.

Ky Says Bombing May End War by Jan. 1

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP -- Premier Nguyen Cao Ky said today the U.S. bombing of North Vietnamese fuel installations may bring the war to an end by Jan. 1.

"I am pleased about this action, I have been advocating it for a long time," Ky told newsmen at the Bien Hoa airbase 15 miles from here where he presided over South Viet Nam's Air Force Day ceremonies. "I am not recommending the bombing of populated areas, but all strategic areas must be attacked."

Sad Day for Mississippi

By JOHN HALL

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi, the first state to ratify national prohibition in 1918, today ended the last statewide ban on liquor in the United States with an ironic touch.

One bootlegger—a man of unknown years who goes by the name Red Hydrick—is flatly disgusted with the change. Hydrick is probably the best-known bootlegger in central Mississippi.

Although liquor became legal at 12:01 a.m., it won't really be legal until a county votes itself wet—which will take at least 16 days.

Gov. Paul B. Johnson has vowed strict compliance with statewide enforcement of prohibition until such referendums are held. It was Johnson who called for legalization earlier this year, terming prohibition a farce.

Red Hydrick sat in his bootlegger shack on the banks of the muddy Pearl River in Rankin County across from Jackson late Thursday night, surveyed the bare, unpainted wooden shelves, two empty bourbon bottles, and rasped:

"I've been in this building 27 years and I've gone through hell. There has been a lot of money taken in the front door of this shack, but through the hazards of this racket, there has been a lot go out through the back door."

Hydrick, like all the other illegal sellers of bonded booze, was closing up.

He's made no plans for the future. Most bootleggers are going along with the 16-day dry spell because the new Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has vowed that anyone caught selling during the interim won't get a legal license.

Beer has been legal in the state for years—on a local option basis. And beer is all that will be allowed until counties vote themselves wet.

Thus, for a time, Mississippi's $36-million annual illegal liquor business has been halted. Under the old system, the state collected nearly $1 million annually in a black-market tax on booze.

Modern Cowboys Start Herd Moving Toward Kansas

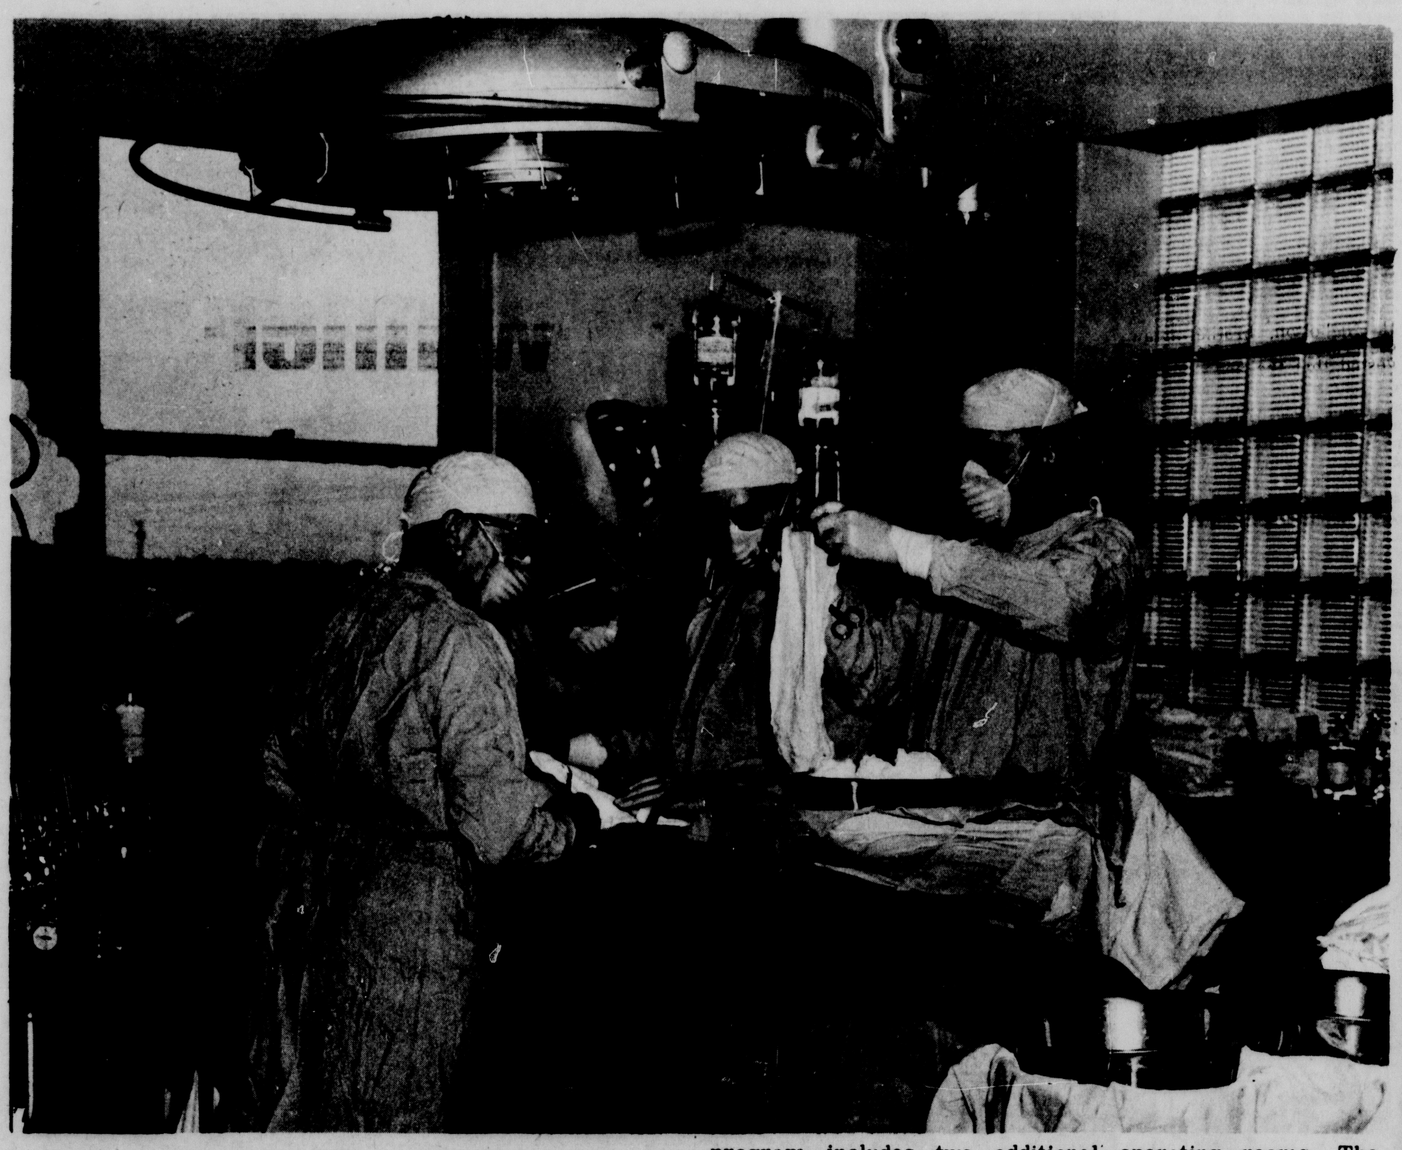

ALTUS, Okla. (AP) — Fresh from a victorious Indian "battle" and a night of dancing, barbecuing and roping, a group of Texas cowpokes and their 93 Longhorn cattle moved out today toward Dodge City, Kan.

The group left San Antonio, Tex., last Sunday and is due in Dodge City Saturday. The drive is to mark the 100th anniversary of the trail drives after the Civil War.

Texas Lt. Gov. Preston Smith rode ahead of the group as it crossed into Oklahoma over the Red River and was met by Oklahoma Lt. Gov. Leo Winters.

Six Indians in warpaint also met the party but the cowboys drove them off, just like in the movies.

After getting into Oklahoma, the cattle were trucked to Altus, paraded down main street and to a rodeo enclosure. The cowboys took part in the barbecue, square dancing and roping contests.

Mother Drowns 3 Children For 2nd Time in 12 Years

FAIRFIELD, Maine (AP) — Three young children were found drowned in their rural home Thursday, in what was almost a duplication of a tragedy 12 years ago when their mother was committed in the drowning of her first three children.

Police said they would seek a murder warrant today against the mother, Constance Fisher, 37.

The bodies were found by the father, Carl Fisher, 45, when he came home from work. In March 1954, he had come home from work, from the same job, to find the first three children dead.

Both times he found his wife unconscious. The first time the children were 6 years, 4 years, and 11 months old. This time, the children were 6 years, 4 years and 9 months old.

Mrs. Fisher was taken to Thayer Hospital in Waterville Thursday night, where she regained consciousness. A hospital spokesman said she appear to be in good condition. She was under police guard.

Police Chief Frederick Gould said three pill boxes were found empty Thursday. He said Mrs. Fisher had taken an overdose of medication. He also said a note was found, but did not disclose its contents.

Twelve years ago, Mrs. Fisher attempted suicide, officials said, by drinking hair shampoo. She left a note then, saying she had killed the children because "God told me to do it," and saying, "They are in heaven, safe from evil."

She was charged with murder then and committed to the State Hospital in Augusta. A grand jury refused to indict her after the hospital reported she was insane.

A hospital spokesman said today that Mrs. Fisher was released March 6, 1959, and that there apparently was no indication of any potential recurrence of her illness.

The father told police he returned home from his job in the car shops of the Maine Central Railroad in Waterville about 5 p.m. Thursday.

He found his 9-month-old daughter, Nathalie Rose lying face down in about 1½ inches of water in the bathtub.

Fisher ran about a quarter of a mile to the nearest home with a telephone, the home of Howard Wood, to summon help.

He and police then found Kathleen Louise, 6, and Michael Jon, lying under blankets in a bed. He found his wife on a bed.

An autopsy by Dr. Irving Goodof, Waterville pathologist, showed the three had drowned. Dr. Maurice Philbrick, county medical examiner, placed the time of death at about 7 a.m. Thursday.

The father was reported in seclusion with friends.

BONNER, Mont. AP -- A woman dropped her sandal in the Blackfoot River Thursday and three youngsters drowned trying to retrieve it.

John Fitzpatrick, 28, of Twin Creeks, Mont., who dived in to rescue the children, also drowned.

The children were Rose Ann Elledge, 15, Deer Lodge, Mont.; Terry Pesanti, 12, Twin Creeks, Mont. and Michael Fitzpatrick, 8, of Andover, Mass. All four bodies were recovered.

Missoula County undersheriff Russell Pulliam said Mrs. John Fitzpatrick lost her sandal in the river. Terry Pesanti leaped into the river first, followed by the other youngsters.

Head Start Brings $3.4 Million Into State

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Missouri communities have received $3,473,181 to operate "Head Start" programs for preschool children this summer.

Philip V. Maher, administrative assistant for urban affairs, said today 18,000 children from low income families will be benefitted. The program includes preparation for school, medical and dental examinations, one hot meal a day and parental participation.

The eight-week program will operate in 128 centers. Funds this year are $1,309,466 more than Missouri got last year under this phase of the Economic Opportunity program.

SEVENTY-NINE YEARS OF SAFETY AND SERVICE TO OUR CUSTOMERS

Viet Nam Montage

by DICK VAUGHAN

The sun beat down on the staging area. The men sat in cloistered groups around the field. It was very hot, and there was no shade to offer any respite so the most they could do for relief was to lay their helmets to one side, and unbutton their shirts, in order to take advantage of any possible breeze.

I sat inside the door of a helicopter, and because of the protection from the sun this gave me, I felt slightly self-conscious for having a better place to wait, than did these men. We were eating breakfast, and for the men, this was the first of many C ration meals they would have during the coming operation, it would however, by my only C ration meal of the day. The box I held was marked "MEAL, INDIVIDUAL, B-2 unit, HAM AND LIMA BEANS." It also contained fruit cake, (which I exchanged for pears). There was an accessory kit containing one book of waterproof matches, four pieces of Chicklets chewing gum, two packages of instant coffee, one package of sugar, one of salt, a pack of cigarettes (4 in the pack), marked "NOT TO BE SOLD", and one tightly rolled packet of toilet tissue. I opened the meal with my P-38 can opener, which is a small finger operated can opener that I keep attached to my dog tag chain.

Someone came around handing out mail to several of the men, and I watched one as he read his letter. He was about twenty - five yards away from me, and he didn't know I was observing him as he read. He held the letter securely in front of him and read with such an intensity, that it looked as if he were trying to dissolve into the written pages. His eyes were glued to the pages, and his lips moved slightly. He was totally oblivious to the inevitable horseplay going on around him. I found myself wondering a little about him. He seemed so young! This time last year, I mused, he was probably pestering his father for the use of the car, to go to Graduation Prom, or some such event. He looked as if he should be worrying about whether his school would have a winning season in football, rather than preparing for a combat assault.

The GRF had begun now, and once over the LZ, there was the normal radio chatter pinpointing gun positions, calling for one element to close, calling for gun - ship support, etc. The gun - ships darted around like snake doctors beside water. They were firing rockets, 20 and 40mm rounds, and spraying machine gun fire into Charlie's positions. We spotted a VC firing from a cement bunker, and our right door gunner hit him with about a five second burst. Scratch one VC!

Finally, the helicopters discharged all their loads, (our helicopter doesn't carry troops, only equipment for making on the spot repair of aircraft, or to rig them for sling removal), and we left the area to return to home base.

I have moved from my original field position, and now live in a building right outside the gate of Tan Son Nhut Air Base. My building is next door to the hospital, and on nights that it doesn't rain, they show movies on the hospital lawn. I was waiting for the movie to start, when an ambulance arrived. They began off - loading the wounded from that morning's operation.

I stepped to one side to allow them to pass with one of the men. His shirt was off, and his pants had been loosened. There was a blood soaked bandage around his stomach. He was barefoot, and his boots hung from one end of the stretcher. A third medic walked alongside, holding up a bottle of a clear liquid, which was slowly draining into the wounded soldier.

When I looked at his face, I noted that his expression was one of confused curiosity, rather than fear of pain. He was about the same age as the young man I had seen reading the letter earlier that morning. It would have come as no surprise to me, if he had indeed been the same man. (I will never call them boys, they have all been deprived of their boyhood, and whether they are ready or not, or whether they want it or not, they have been thrust, some bleeding, some screaming with pain, some even dying into manhood.)

These men did not rush forward with exuberent patriotism, the war here is not a game for them. It is not something gloriously exciting, but is something that they know must be done, and they take no pleasure in hot, lonely, most always tedious, and frequently very frightening job.

A STORM sewer project is nearing completion at the east edge of East Prairie. Shown is a small section of the five-foot drainage pipe. The sewer starts at the Methodist church and runs for 3/4 of a mile to the east edge of the school property. When completed it will solve the heavy drainage problems in that area.

Draft Study Urges Taking Young First

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON (AP)—A long-awaited Defense Department study concluded today that the draft should be redesigned to induct the youngest eligible men first and not men nearest 26—"those who are the most settled in their careers."

The change would shift the emphasis to the 19-20 age bracket.

"Combat commanders prefer the younger age group" the study said, "and about eight of 10 volunteers are in the age group under 20."

The study, presented to the House Armed Services Committee by Asst. Secretary of Defense Thomas D. Morris, made these other principal points:

—The United States can not look forward to discontinuing the draft in the next decade unless changing world conditions reduce needs substantially below the force levels required since Korea.

—An all-volunteer force cannot be justified because it would cost anywhere between $4 billion and $17 billion to increase military pay enough to attract the volunteers needed even for a pre-Viet Nam force of 2.7 million. More than 3 million are in service now.

—The present deferment system is "basically sound."

Morris, in charge of manpower for the Defense Department, testified as the committee wound up its hearings into the operations of the Selective Service System.

Cotton Research Bill Passes Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The House completed congressional action on a bill to set up a grower - financed program of research and promotion for cotton. The bill now goes to President Johnson.

The program would be financed by a checkoff system in which growers would be assessed $1 a bale at the time they sell their cotton. Growers not desiring to participate could get their money returned after several months.

Rebirth of Ozark Region

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 30- Problems and prospects of an economic rebirth in the Ozark Region of Missouri, Arkansas, and Oklahoma are discussed by two economists in an article in the current (July-August) issue of Business and Government Review, bi-monthly publication of the University of Missouri's Business and Public Administration Research Center.

One hundred twenty-five designated as an "economic development" region under provisions of the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965. An Ozark Regional Planning Commission has been set up to coordinate federal-state programs.

The state universities in Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma are coordinating their research and extension efforts in the region through a new organization called Ozarks Unlimited, Inc., of which Dr. C. B. Ratchford, University of Missouri vice-president for extension, is chairman, and Dr. Raymond E. Peck, University vice- president for research, is a director. The University of Arkansas, Oklahoma State University, and the University of Oklahoma are also represented among the officers.

Co-authors of the Review article, titled "Spotlight on the Ozarks," are Dr. Lloyd D. Bender, a member of the Economic Development Division of Economic Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, and Dr. V. James Rhodes, professor and chairman of the Department of Agricultural Economics at the University here. Dr. Bender in his federal position is concerned with the planning of research projects for the Ozark area and works closely with the University staff in Columbia. He received his doctorate from the University; Dr. Rhodes holds a doctorate from Harvard Uni-

The current issue of the Review includes also articles on "Commercial Bank Markets: A Case Study," by Dr. Harry L. Johnson, associate professor in the Graduate School of Business, University of Texas; "Program Budgeting --Applying Economic Analysis to Government Expenditure Decisions," by Dr. Murray L. Weidenbaum, associate professor of economics at Washington University, St. Louis; and "Japanese Ideologies and Cross-cultural Understanding," a summary of an address by Mrs. Kiyoko T. Cho, professor of history in International Christian University, Tokyo, Japan, presented at the Mid-America Assembly held at the University here in April 1966. The Review also has a report on the Mid-America Assembly, titled "U.S.-Japanese Relations Considered."

Drs. Bender and Rhodes in their discussion of the Ozarks point out that designation of the 125 counties as an economic development region will "bring not only national attention to the region, but also an opportunity for its people to plan and guide future economic and social progress." The region's economy, they write, lacks the affluence of the other growing parts of the United States, yet it has potential for growth, and "various federal programs, combined with local initiative and private capital, will be the tools used in trying to build a healthier economy."

They report that the swift economic development of the past century has largely bypassed the region, with a declining but persistent agriculture still the largest single source of employment, while the area suffers from chronic under-employment, lack of economic opportunity, and low incomes for many of its people. Out-migration from the region is heavy, as high as 60 per cent in the younger age brackets in 1950-60.

"Policies for development have focused on two extremes," the economists write. "One might be called education-migration--critics call it the evacuation policy. The other is an area development policy, which critics say is preservation of the status quo and is oriented to physical resources rather than people.

"Proponents of each approach agree the resources of the region are insufficiently developed to support adequately its resident population. Shall the balance be restored by reducing the population or by developing the resources? Past expansion of economic activity in the Ozarks has not begun to keep pace with the ever-flowing well of youth born, reared, and educated in these mountains. Manufacturing activity for instance has increased at a very rapid rate in the Ozarks. Yet, in the last decade, the number of people leaving agricultural employment was 3 1/2 times greater than the increase in manufacturing employment.

"Both the advocates of out-migration and of area development agree on the importance of improved education and skill training for youngsters and adults. Skills must be obtained if the people are to take more productive jobs in, or outside the region. In 1960, one out of 10 Ozark adults was a functional illiterate with less than five years of formal schooling. Only 31 per cent had completed high school compared to 41 per cent for the nation. If the Ozarks are to 'catch up' a higher than average level of education must be attained by school children. Moreover, any tangible results in the near future require a much greater program of adult education.

"Those favoring the area development approach fear the social and economic effects of large out-migration. They point to the downward spiral of economic activity resulting from the eroding effect of migration. With large out-migration rates for youth, population remaining is disproportionately very old and very young-- the non-producing members of society. The result is a burden of social services which cannot be met by the tax base. Literally millions of dollars of private and social investment are represented by young migrants. No region can suffer such a drain of human capital indefinitely and continue to progress."

The writers point out further that outside public and private assistance is desirable if the people and resources of underdeveloped regions are to meet the challenges of the 20th century. However, they continue, local initiative, foresight and careful planning are required effectively to use the outside assistance in shaping the destiny of the Ozark region. The authors discuss relevant legislation for aid and ways for implementation.

The Ozark Regional Planning Commission, the article reports, is set up to "review and study, advise and assist, and formulate and recommend policies and plans."

"The Commission, therefore, will have important responsibilities for coordinating all existing federal and state programs--through its authorization to make recommendations on the 'expenditure of funds by federal, state and local departments and agencies in its region in the field of natural resources, agriculture, education, training, health and welfare, and transportation.' In addition to its potential as a coordinator, the Commission can request funds directly from the Congress to support development plans."

The authors comment that although manufacturing employment is growing at a much more rapid rate in the Ozarks than in the entire United States, it has been confined for the most part to only a few small urban centers. Considerable priority, they say, presumably will have to be given to the development of manufacturing and associated services, and "to the extent that industries are local, labor oriented, or business-services oriented, the growing towns and cities are likely to be the best sites. . . Recreation, timber, mining, agriculture and agri-business are also promising industries. These enterprises tend to demand resource- oriented investments. Where the large and growing cities are not located near reservoirs, ore sites, or timber reserves, then sizable investments may be needed in rural centers."

They point out also that it "is apparent that more highways through the Ozarks would have benefits," especially north-south highways to provide more convenient access among the large cities, while there are "also obvious needs" for better access roads within the region.

"The general lines for development seem clear. Agricultural employment will eventually stabilize at a considerably lower figure. . Industrial employment will continue to grow. Investment and employment in recreation will grow. Utilization of timber and minerals will expand but with relatively minor impact upon total employment. If various mineral processing industries can be added to extraction, then an increase in employment would occur."

The article also takes up the part of the state universities in the three states are taking through new research underway. Some projects, they report, "aim at better understanding of the area's human and physical resources. Some are projecting economic activity within the present environment. Some are continuing to examine the potential for growth in the substantial recreation industry clustered around the principal lakes."

In their conclusion the authors say that "most of the planning can only be done by Ozark residents . . . as they act together to achieve common goals. Before there are federal investments, matching funds must be provided by the states or localities. Before there can be zoning, local people must desire it. If the Ozarks have economic rebirth, it is private capital and private entrepreneurship which will play the larger role. Public investments and planning can be catalytic at best."

Four Things Recommended City

Sikeston's Traffic Committee recently made four recommendations to the City Council and City Manager Raymert Miller.

"We do not believe that installation of STOP signs stopping north bound and south bound traffic on Davis Street at Wakefield, is in the public interest. This would be stopping the non-turning traffic to permit turning traffic from Wakefield to take precedence. This is against normal conventional traffic practice. If the apartment house now being completed at this typical T connection contained 20 or more times the number of apartments it does contain, our recommendation may be different.

"Installation of 3-way STOP signs at Kingshighway and Center Street, stopping all except northbound traffic on Kingshighway. This committee, since its beginning in 1955, has been acutely aware of this particular street intersection. We have consistently believed that (1) this intersection is not an accident breeder; (2) traffic at this intersection is not too heavy to be self-regulatory; and (3) Unnecessary regulatory signs waste peoples' time and money and engender a contempt for such signs; (4) Since no visibility problems exist at this corner except for northbound traffic, and then only when turning right and since east-west traffic on Center Street is now yielding to Kingshighway traffic, we are not aware of any problem which could be alleviated by more signs. We therefore recommend no action.

"Your committee discussed a suggestion that traffic speed of 40 mph on Murray Lane between Kingshighway and the Frisco railroad be permitted instead of 30 mph as presently permitted. Your committee recommends no change.

This committee discussed informally the present 4-way STOP signs on New Madrid at Center and North Streets, and the merits of these present (temporary) 4-way STOP signs as against the automatic STOP-GO signal lights now removed for repairs; we are in agreement that if the present temporary signs were slightly lower and were reflectorized for better night-time vision, they may be better, and certainly would be for cheaper, regulatory signs than the automatic lights."

Missouri Basin Bill Approved by Congress

WASHINGTON AP -- Congressional action was completed Thursday on a bill authorizing the appropriation of $60 million for work on units of the Missouri River Basin program.

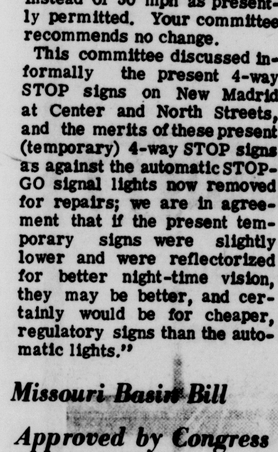

The Senate cleared the House-passed bill and sent it to the White House.

The bill would raise the authorization for spending on the series of dams along the Missouri to above $1 billion. It calls for appropriations of $60 million for use in the two fiscal years beginning July 1 on projects already under construction.

Reclamation Bureau engineers prpose to spend $27,270,000 in the two years on the Glen Elder project in Kansas.

The legislation calls for $12,694,000 for power transmission facilities throughout the basin, $6,559,000 for Yellowtail Dam in Montana, $2,652,000 for the Almena project in Kansas and smaller sums for other projects.

THIS WEEK SALUTING FIRST GENERAL BAPTIST CHURCH

GENERAL BAPTIST CHURCH COVENANT

Having given ourselves to God, we now give ourselves to His church, and covenant with it and with each other as also with God- ---

1. That we will forsake all unrighteousness -- even the appearance of evil. We will abstain from all questionable pursuits and pleasures -- we will forego all hurtful habits -- we will avoid all evil associations; and we will "touch not, taste not, handle not" any unclean thing.

2. That we will follow earnestly after righteousness and true holiness, in the fear and love of God. We shall seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, trusting that all needful and helpful things will be added to us. We will seek entire consecration to God -- we will live a life of prayer -- we will seek the constant abiding of the divine life within us -- we will be satisfied only when we have the evidence that we please God and are accepted of Him.

3. That we will faithfully improve all the means of grace. We will attend and support the services of the church, the preaching, the social services, the business meetings. We will contribute freely of our means for the advancement of the gospel -- we will co-operate with our brethren in every enterprise having for its end the glory of God and the salvation of men.

4. That we will be Christ-like in all our deportment. We will be tender and affectionate toward each other -- we will be careful of each other's reputation -- thinking no evil and backbiting not with our tongues -- we will return good for evil -- we will be just and honest, truthful and honorable in all our dealings -- we will do unto others as we would be done by -- we will be meek, loving and forgiving, as we desire and hope to be forgiven.

5. That we will be faithful Christian workers. We will do whatever Christian work comes to hand, shunning no cross, shirking no duty. We will even seek opportunities to do good, glorify God and save souls. We will study to win our associates, our neighbors, our families, all whom we may influence to become Christians. We will count it more than our meat and our drink, more than all things else to do the will of our Father in heaven, to lead souls from sin and death and lead them to God and heaven.

IMPROVED BY-PASS approach on highway 80 at the west edge of East Prairie, and leading east to the new highway 77 around the northern edge of the city to Charleston. In the picture are three islands leading to both highways. The west entrance was widened and new curbing was built by the Missouri Petroleum Company. What was once a dangerous curve, is now a safe east and west two highway business route.

15 Pass Tests At Portageville

PORTAGEVILLE -- Fifteen New Madrid countians passed and 14 failed in operator tests given at Portageville Friday, according to information furnished by examiners for the State Highway Patrol, who said that nine received driver licenses and six received instruction permits.

Of the 14 who failed, half were on the written portion of the examination and half were on the road part.

Scholarship Renewed

Patricia Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wood, 154 Jefferson, has been granted renewal of her Founders' Scholarship at Culver-Stockton College.

Miss Wood, who will be a sophomore, was awarded the renewal on the basis of continuing academic excellence. The scholarships are awarded to incoming freshmen with outstanding academic and activity records in high school. The scholarships are renewable each year.

Mental Health Unit Sponsors Workshops

KENNETT -- The Southeast Missouri Mental Health Association will serve as sponsor of sheltered workshop programs for the mentally retarded in Dunklin, Pemiscot and New Madrid Counties, it was announced Thursday by Troy Wilson of Kennett, association president.

Wilson said the decision to serve as sponsor for the sheltered workshop programs was made at the association's board of directors meeting, held this week at Hayti.

The workshop program envisioned by the association, Wilson said, is the extended employment workshop program which provides permanent employment for lower range educable and upper range trainable mentally retarded, as well as other handicapped persons.

Persons eligible for the workshop program must be 18 years or older, must have had some type of school training and have a productive work capacity in sheltered environment adapted to the abilities of the retarded, but whose limited capabilities make them non-employable in competitive business and industry and unsuited for vocational rehabilitation training.

Some 30 per cent of mentally retarded youth are in this category.

Missouri's 1965 laws establishing the workshop program are designed to provide state aid in the organization and operation of extended employment workshops established by local non-profit community groups to provide employment opportunities for 30 per cent of the mentally retarded.

Wilson said the SEMO Mental Health Association is also making plans to establish another mental health clinic in the Bootheel, with the second unit to be located at the Pemiscot County Mental Health Center at Hayti. He said the opening of the second clinic would depend upon the availability of a psychiatrist from the Farmington State Hospital.

The association is currently seeking funds in the Bootheel to underwrite the cost of the clinic and to carry out educational and advisory programs in the Bootheel.

State Mental Units to Add Job Training

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — New vocational rehabilitation units will open today at the St. Joseph and Farmington state hospitals, to help train recovered mental patients and find jobs for them.

It is a joint effort by the Division of Mental Diseases and the vocational rehabilitation section of the Department of Education.

They were planned because of the success of a similar unit at the Nevada State Hospital. Joy O. Talley, head of vocational rehabilitation, said the Nevada unit placed 109 former mental patients in jobs during the past fiscal year.

The tentative budget for the St. Joseph facility will be $323,248 and for Farmington $336,680. Federal funds will amount to 75 per cent of the cost. Each unit will be staffed with counselors, social workers, psychologists and registered nurses.

At St. Joseph the unit will occupy part of a wing in the administration building and at Farmington part of one of the dormitory halls. Each will house up to 60 patients.

Cecil Brown, director of the Nevada unit, will come to Jefferson City to supervise the overall administration of the rehabilitation facilities at the three hospitals. He will be succeeded at Nevada by James L. Gonterman, who has been a psychiatric social worker there.

Meriell Sindt of Jefferson City will supervise the St. Joseph unit and Danny R. Alcorn of Cape Girardeau will direct the Farmington center. Both have been vocational rehabilitation counselors.

The units will simulate normal living conditions as much as possible and patients will be given an opportunity to work at jobs on the hospital grounds and in the commuuity to help them develop good attitudes and habits.

Individual Freedom And The Common Defence

by Walter Millis

The answer returned by the Supreme Court, in its various free speech decisions, turns upon the reality and urgency of the perils, whether of persuasion or of conspiracy, actually presented by the heretical or seditious belief. A free society may, indeed must, defend itself from genuine dangers arising from seditious teachings and disloyal beliefs. Whether the danger is that the enough minds to make possible a violent overthrow of our institutions by mob action, or whether it is that the disloyal faith will engender a dangerous infiltration of these institutions to distort their purposes and penetrate their secrets in the interests of a foreign power, makes no difference. There is quite obviously not the slightest present danger of violent overthrow as a result of the educational efforts of the Communist party or its schools and missionaries, yet the Court found that the party's conspiratorial activities were at least so dangerous that Congress could not, despite the First Amendment, be denied power to legislate against them by prohibiting (in the Smith Act) the teaching and advocacy of the Communist belief.

The true theoretical argument revolves, then around the reality of the peril--not the peril presented by specific Communist spies, saboteurs, or infiltrators, but the peril presented by the holding and teaching of the belief which presumably incites such persons to their acts. There is no question that this danger has been enormously exaggerated in the public mind by many forces, operating from many motives. The natural fears of the society as a whole engendered by a difficult and awesome international situation are by no means a complete explanation; these fears have received powerful reinforcement and exploitation from the pressures of personal ambition and partisan fury, from the tendency of the security officers and secret police to magnify their accomplishments and justify their function in society, from the reactions of those who see in Communism less a threat to the free society as a whole than to their own positions of power or profit, from the natural, if irrational, hatred which most men feel toward any heretical or non-conformist challange. The dangers have been grossly exaggerated. Yet there is also little doubt that they are in some measure real. They are doubtless real enough to authorize some departure from the spirit of the First Amendment and the Jeffersonian principle that the civil authority may not "intrude his powers into the field of opinion." They are hardly real enough to authorize all the departures of the past few years. This has recently been increasingly recognized in court decisions and popular reactions. Yet the problem of just where and how to draw the dividing line remains; it is probably the most basic of all the issues which divide the devoted "anti-Communists" from the devoted "libertarians."

TO ALL THE PEOPLE OF SCOTT COUNTY

I WOULD LIKE TO SAY THAT SO MANY OF US DON'T REALIZE HOW IMPORTANT IT IS AND WHAT A GREAT PRIVILEDGE IT IS TO BE ABLE TO CAST OUR VOTE ON ELECTION DAY. WE CAN'T SIT AT HOME AND EXPECT TO HAVE THE BEST OFFICIALS. SO I URGE ALL OF YOU TO COME OUT ON AUGUST 2nd. AND VOTE FOR THE PERSON OF YOUR CHOICE.

I WAS NOT HIRED TO RUN FOR THIS OFFICE. I AM RUNNING TO WIN AND I AM USING MY OWN MONEY. (THAT IS WHY YOU DON'T SEE TOO MANY OF MY POSTERS.)

AS FOR MY QUALIFICATIONS, I HAD ALL THE ACCOUNTING OFFERED IN HIGH SCHOOL AND TWO YEARS OF ACCOUNTING IN COLLEGE. I AM SURE THAT THIS WOULD ENABLE ANYONE TO RUN FOR THE OFFICE OF COLLECTOR.

BUT ABOVE ALL I BELIEVE THAT HONESTY AND THE WILLINGNESS TO WORK HARD IS THE MOST IMPORTANT QUALIFICATION THAT A PERSON CAN HAVE IN SEEKING A COUNTY OFFICE.

MY PURPOSE IN RUNNING FOR THIS OFFICE IS TO GIVE YOU, THE PEOPLE OF SCOTT COUNTY, A CHOICE IN THIS YEAR'S ELECTION.

YOU THE PEOPLE ARE PAYING HARD EARNED MONEY FOR THE COUNTY OFFICIALS. IF ELECTED I EXPECT TO EARN MY SALARY BY BEING AT THE OFFICE FULL TIME AND DOING MY JOB TO THE VERY BEST OF MY ABILITY.

I AM VERY INTERESTED IN OUR COUNTY AND I WOULD LIKE TO SEE IT RUN THE RIGHT WAY. THE WAY THAT IT SHOULD BE RUN.

I WISH THAT I COULD SEE AND VISIT WITH ALL OF YOU BEFORE ELECTION BUT I KNOW THAT WILL BE IMPOSSIBLE. I'M ASKING FOR YOUR VOTE AND SUPPORT IN THIS ELECTION. AGAIN I URGE YOU TO GET UP AND GET OUT ON ELECTION DAY, HONOR THE GREAT PRIVILEDGE THAT YOU HAVE AND CAST YOUR VOTE.

WE ALL NEED TO BE MORE CONCERNED IN OUR COUNTY AFFAIRS.

YOUR INTEREST, HELP AND VOTE WILL BE APPRECIATED.

Thank You
Dennis Holland

FOR COLLECTOR

Dr. Ralph Parker

New School Formed at M.U.

COLUMBIA, Mo., July 1 - Chancellor John W. Schwada announced today that the Board of Curators of the University of Missouri has established a School of Library Science effective July 1 and named Dr. Ralph Halstead Parker, University librarian since 1946, as its dean.

The new school which raises to 14 the number of divisions on the campus here, will represent an expansion of a present undergraduate library science curriculum to a full course of study offering a master's degree.

Chancellor Schwada said that the new division will have two primary goals, to train librarians to staff the rapidly expanding public school libraries and to offer instruction on new developments in library operation to prospective heads of larger public and private libraries.

Dr. Parker said that library school graduates are in great demand in the public school system, where library operations are being expanded to elementary school levels. At the same time, many of the older librarians are unfamiliar with newer developments in their field such as use of computers in library operations.

Under Dr. Parker, the University Library has moved into the computer field in a program that has attracted international attention. Dr. Parker believes that the University here is doing more in computer operation of libraries than all the other schools in the nation combined.

For the present the new school will be housed in the Library Building, where Dean Parker will have his office and where he will continue serving as university librarian until a successor is named.

His faculty at the moment consists of Francis J. Flood, assistant professor of library science, who has been chairman of the library science department which has been a part of the College of Arts and Science. Dean Parker said he expects to enlarge the faculty to five members as quickly as possible and to expand further as enrollment grows.

Dean Parker said that a start on the graduate program will be made during the fall semester opening in September, but that for the first year not enough courses will be offered in the master's program to produce a graduate by next June. The undergraduate program, which at present consists of 13 courses covering little more than two semesters of study plus eight related courses, will be continued, however, and some studies leading toward a master's degree will be inaugurated.

Dean Parker, native of Bertram, Tex., where he was born April 21, 1909, has Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts, and Doctor of Philosophy degrees he earned at the University of Texas between 1929 and 1935, and he spent a year as research fellow at the University of Chicago. He was with the University of Texas Library for six years, was librarian and associate professor of history at Pomona (Calif.) College for three, and directed University of Georgia libraries for six years, interrupted by a three-year assignment to the machine records branch of the adjutant general's office in the Army during World War II.

He is author of several publications on libraries and other topics and has written books on "Imperialism and the Liberation of Cuba" and "Punched Cards in Libraries."

As University librarian he supervised construction of the final wing to the half-century old Library Building and inaugurated the "open stack" method that permits free selection of books by students. With computers, records are kept on books checked out and rapid information is available on those overdue as well as a check on the flow and demand of the volumes.

With inauguration of the new school, the University here will have separate divisions headed by deans in fields of agriculture, arts and science, business and public administration, education, engineering, extension and community services, and veterinary medicine.

During hibernation, commonly known as winter sleep, some animals endure prolonged periods of cold. The body temperature does not conform to that of the air and may go down to a few degrees above freezing, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Looking Back Over The Years

50 Years Ago
July 1, 1916

John Bragg, who has been playing first base on Sikeston ball team, left for St. Edwards, Neb., Wednesday where he will join another ball club.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Young entertained with a dinner on June 7th, in honor of the first birth anniversary of their son, Harry, jr.

Wheat harvest is underway in the Sikeston district. It will average about half a crop. The corn never looked better at this time of the year.

40 Years Ago
July 1, 1926

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Gervig and children left Monday for Belleville, Ill., where they will make their home.

Dr. Dean of Portageville has been in Sikeston this week preparatory to establishing a dental office.

30 Years Ago
July 1, 1936

Work was started Tuesday on a home Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Bowles are building on a lot at the corner of Vernon and College avenues.

Frankie Engram, C. D. Butler, and James Edward Butler will leave Sunday for the Southeast Missouri area Boy Scout camp on the St. Francis River, north of Greenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Pleas Malcolm have moved into their recently completed stucco bungalow on North Ranney.

July 1, 1946

Last year C. E. Felker offered to the State Highway Department a tract of land north of Benton to be known as the Clarence E. Felker Memorial Park. This week a letter was received in part as follows: The Commission at its regular meeting for May agreed to accept your generous offer of an area of three acres of land for a roadside park.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hoxworth of Morley are parents of a daughter born last Thursday at St. Francis hospital, Cape Girardeau.

Approximately 200 additional acres at Harvey Parks Airport together with the control tower and two large hangars have been leased from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by the city of Sikeston for use as a municipal airport. The city previously had leased 458 acres of the airport tract including one building known as the paint house, which gives the city control of practically all the tract of slightly over 700 acres with the exception of the barracks, hospital and administration buildings and the one big warehouse.

Response of the people of the Sikeston area has been enthusiastic to the Missouri Delta Community hospital drive. Solicitors are working to raise $160,000 in an area covered by a 25-mile radius of Sikeston.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 12-year-old girl who has a problem. It is my father. He does things that get me all mixed up. Here is what I mean:

Last night he yelled at me because I spilled a glass of lemonade on the living room floor and I didn't wipe it up very good. When he saw some small puddles here and there he got mad and called me a sloppy kid and ordered me to clean up the mess right.

I got some rags and started to wipe the stuff up when my dad came in the room with a mop. He dried my tears with his handkerchief and mopped up the floor for me.

This kind of thing happens all the time. I don't know if I should thank him for helping me or be mad at him for yelling at me. Please tell me what to think.--CRAZY MIXED UP KID

Dear Kid: Your dad is the one who has a problem. He feels guilty about hollering at you and then he tries to make nice kitty.

The next time your dad behaves this way, say to him, "Look dad, I deserved to get chewed out, so please don't confuse me by acting like YOU did something wrong."

Your letter is further evidence that it's getting tougher every day to bring up parents.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a serious problem and am turning to you for help -- like thousands of others.

I am 15 years old and just started to wear makeup. My mother is a real square and whenever she sees me with lipstick and mascara she gets mad and makes me take it off. My father, however, is a swell guy. He thinks makeup looks great on me. Please tell me what to do. -- FLOYD

Dear Floyd: You'd better take off the makeup, Hon, if you want to play on the football team. You dolls from Cal Tech could use some help out there on the field next season.

And now that you've written your fifth phony letter of the season will you please lay off and stop wasting my time?

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 26-year-old woman who has been married for five years. We have two fine sons and our marriage is a steady one.

My in-laws did not like me when I came into the family but I felt that in time they would see I was the right girl for their son and that gradually they would warm up to me. I tried awfully hard to be kind and considerate to them although they were always noticeably cool to me.

Last week my father-in-law casually remarked he was still not certain his son made the right choice when he selected me. I was dumbfounded and so was my husband. Neither of us replied.

Do you feel I should stop taking these insults in silence? I think perhaps I am stupid to just sit there and let my in-laws abuse me. May I have your opinion? -- VERY HURT

Dear Hurt: You should NOT respond to these insults but your husband must have macaroni where his spine belongs for allowing such a remark to pass unanswered. It is your husband's place to tell his parents that HE is sure his choice was the right one.

Obviously he is unaware that it's HIS responsibility, so I suggest you inform him.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

THE PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

FRIDAY, JULY 1, 1966

Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted in me? hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him for the help of his countenance. (Psalm 42:5)

PRAYER: Loving Father, who from everlasting art God and whose being nothing can destroy, help us to trust in Thee when we cannot see. May we persevere in holding fast our faith amid difficulty. In Christ's name we ask. Amen.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1898, Col. Theodore Roosevelt's "Rough Rider" regiment of volunteer cavalry charged across open fields against Spanish forces dug in atop San Juan Hill in Cuba during the Spanish-American War.

On this date

In 1924, daily air mail service was inaugurated between New York and San Francisco.

In 1942, Nazi General Rommel's "Afrika Korps" reached El Alemain.

Ten years ago — Soviet Communist Chief Nikita Khrushchev was quoted in the Cairo press as asserting that Israel was seeking to maintain a state of tension in the Middle East to assure the continuance of Western Aid.

Five years ago — French President Charles de Gaulle made two speeches in Paris, calling for international and domestic peace.

One year ago — Communist North Viet Nam rejected a request by British Prime Minister Harold Wilson to permit a Western peace mission to visit Hanoi to talk about ending the Viet Nam war.

Famed Times Square Hotel Closes Doors

By JERRY BUCK

NEW YORK (AP) — The Hotel Astor, which has stood along gaudy Times Square like a maiden aunt for nearly 62 years, calls it quits today.

This morning her last 150 guests will check out, the 450 employes will leave their jobs, and the wrecking crew will take over. The Astor, a Broadway landmark, is coming down to make way for a 40-story office building.

"It's sad. Any passing is sad," said Erwin O. Schel, the hotel's general manager.

Henry Pottberg, the assistant bell captain, looked across the red-carpeted lobby and said, "The Astor's just out of this world. It's been like a second home to me. I've spent half of my life here."

For years the Astor was home to presidents and show business people. Every president since 1933 has stayed at the hotel, and once, according to a favorite Astor legend, a man went to sleep thinking he was president —and woke up a loser.

He was Charles Evans Hughes, who bedded down in the presidential suite in 1916 after hearing the favorable early returns. But during the night the California vote came in and put Woodrow Wilson in the White House.

The lobby of the Astor didn't look like a hotel on its last night. Guests still were checking in, and Schel said the hotel had to turn down hundreds of reservations that continued to pour in.

In the past 20 years New York has lost 33 hotels. On the same day the Astor closes, the Sheraton-East on Park Avenue also closes its doors. Nonetheless, New York has more hotel rooms now than it did in 1945 because of the new skyscraper hotels that have gone up—and the emergence of motor hotels in Manhattan.

Girl Reorganizes Hayti Community

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- The bootheel, and especially Hayti Heights and Pemiscot County, will never be the same now that a girl of Japanese birth has come there to teach the people how to live, according to claims made by a magazine published by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The bootheel is described in the magazine as a "section so named because it pokes down in Arkansas like a shoe into mud."

The girl and her job was introduced this way in the magazine: Her car "spins off into a dirt road, and bumps through a place called Hayti Heights. The Heights seems a village in wee. It is a collection of frame shanties perched on Delta mud. Even under the cheerful sun the Heights is scarred with seres of deep poverty. Shanties are sprung at the seams, yards are unpaved, and fences sag. Rain water from the night before fills ditches at road sides."

But Marilyn is cheerful and is greeted by all as "honey" or by her first name. All people confide in her and ask for her help with their problems.

There are 2,500 people just outside the town, but not a part of it. One woman's trouble was she had been cut off from welfare, Marilyn pitched to help her. She "scooped" up a child to love it, found its eye infected, and made a date to take it to the clinic.

Marilyn had troubles of her own when she moved there. The best she could do was to get quarters of one room, "no stove, no refrigerator, no anything." She was refused an apartment because she was Japanese. She worked for a while at the health center, teaching women to wash their babies, and feed them, and then she was "kicked out of the center."

Then the miracles began; She organized the community, or as they say around the OEO headquarters, "that 20 year old kid who organized a whole community single handed." She got the 2,500 to form a government outside the government. They demanded more paved roads, improvements in drainage, better sanitation, a community center, and other improvements.

There was no culture except a movie now and then from Memphis, and little of anything else, besides "mud, cotton, and poverty." But the whole community has started the "climb upwards because of her."

She had three other VISTA volunteers to help her in the nearby communities, two of whom were from California also. One was a graduate at Berkeley. One was from Colorado University.

Though her job was to teach adults, she and her roommate would let the children roam their home, play games with the, tell them stories, and give them milk and cookies.

This is the story of how a 20-year-old Japanese girl completely changed the lives for the better of this bootheel town. The article can be found in the magazine "Communities in Action," published by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Indian Homesites Being Uncovered In Mississippi County Area

JIM HOPGOOD, left, viewing several particles of pottery being uncovered by John Claggett and Howard Platz, both of Shelbina. The mound excavations of former Baytime Indian culture of almost 1000 years ago is located on highway 77 and county road MM and AA.

EAST PRAIRIE -- A group of Missouri University anthropology instructors, together with college and high school students, are excavating Indian burial grounds, and former homesites.

The digging is being done southeast of East Prairie on county highway MM. The first digging was done off highway 80 on route AA.

In charge of the excavation is James Hopgood, formerly of East Prairie and now assistant associate director of anthropology, University of Missouri; Ray Williams, research associate, department of anthropology, Missouri University.

In the first excavation on the Shell Island tract, the group uncovered a number of skeletons, consisting of two adults and a child, as well as a special infant burial ground. It was observed that a special burial process was observed; the infants had objects pressed against the back of their skulls to give the skull a more flattened shape.

The new digging on route MM is to explore the homes of the old Baytown Indian culture that roamed this area many centuries ago, before the coming of the later Indian tribes.

It has been found that the Baytown culture was a peaceful agricultural tribe. The homes are found to be in a circular fashion for their large meeting places. Many types of cooking ware made of pottery have been found.

In one spot were found charred walnuts, hickory nuts, hazel nuts, and also a bit of corn. The bottoms of floor dwellings are found at a depth of from 18 to 30 inches below the surface, and was along the former Mississippi river banks of centuries ago. The sites have been covered with a black loam, and the soil type varies from a dark to a lighter texture.

Accompanying the anthropologists are students from various states, all interested in the new findings. Among them are men who are well versed in assembling broken pottery of any early period of Indian civilization, as well as one who is well versed on bone structure of the inhabitants of the varying tribes.

Students found at the excavations this week were Howard Platz, Shelbina high school biology teacher; John Claggett, Kirksville college student; John Clark, University of Texas; John Rees, University of Chicago; Bobby Rappold, Hermann; Tom Dixon, Gary Loomis and Fred Jones, all of East Prairie high school.

The excavating of the sites is taking place on the Allen Brock farm, which is farmed by Paul Haney, East Prairie. The expenses for the project is being provided by the National Park Service and land leveling salvage.

The Hoecake area was the site of numerous diggings in the past two years. Many mounds were uncovered that were burial grounds.

Some of the instructors will continue the excavation to August, while Ray Williams will return in September, and continue the work through December.

New Support on Way for Area Wheat Farmers

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — Increased coverage, averaging 19 per cent, and a new premium discount plan for Missouri wheat farmers in 1967 were announced today by the Federal Crop Insurance Corp.

F. Reed Grainer, Missouri director for FCIC, said the increased wheat coverages are the result of an adjustment based on normal yield increases in the past 10 years due to technical improvements in farming.

He said substantial coverage increases have been set for all of the 47 counties where the wheat insurance program is in effect. In addition, nine counties have been made eligible for the 1967 crop year. They are Boone, Clinton, Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Platte, Randolph and Stoddard.

Grainer saw under the premium discount feature, policyholders who do not experience a loss for one year will be granted a five per cent premium discount for the second year. Previously, policyholders had to have a three-year good experience rating before receiving a discount.

He said the same discount feature also will apply to other crops-corn, tobacco, grain sorghum, soybeans and cotton.

This year the FCIC is providing crop insurance for more than 7,500 farmers in Missouri.

Girl Reorganizes Hayti Community

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- The bootheel, and especially Hayti Heights and Pemiscot County, will never be the same now that a girl of Japanese birth has come there to teach the people how to live, according to claims made by a magazine published by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The bootheel is described in the magazine as a "section so named because it pokes down in Arkansas like a shoe into mud."

The girl and her job was introduced this way in the magazine: Her car "spins off into a dirt road, and bumps through a place called Hayti Heights. The Heights seems a village in wee. It is a collection of frame shanties perched on Delta mud. Even under the cheerful sun the Heights is scarred with seres of deep poverty. Shanties are sprung at the seams, yards are unpaved, and fences sag. Rain water from the night before fills ditches at road sides."

But Marilyn is cheerful and is greeted by all as "honey" or by her first name. All people confide in her and ask for her help with their problems.

There are 2,500 people just outside the town, but not a part of it. One woman's trouble was she had been cut off from welfare, Marilyn pitched to help her. She "scooped" up a child to love it, found its eye infected, and made a date to take it to the clinic.

Marilyn had troubles of her own when she moved there. The best she could do was to get quarters of one room, "no stove, no refrigerator, no anything." She was refused an apartment because she was Japanese. She worked for a while at the health center, teaching women to wash their babies, and feed them, and then she was "kicked out of the center."

Then the miracles began; She organized the community, or as they say around the OEO headquarters, "that 20 year old kid who organized a whole community single handed." She got the 2,500 to form a government outside the government. They demanded more paved roads, improvements in drainage, better sanitation, a community center, and other improvements.

There was no culture except a movie now and then from Memphis, and little of anything else, besides "mud, cotton, and poverty." But the whole community has started the "climb upwards because of her."

She had three other VISTA volunteers to help her in the nearby communities, two of whom were from California also. One was a graduate at Berkeley. One was from Colorado University.

Though her job was to teach adults, she and her roommate would let the children roam their home, play games with the, tell them stories, and give them milk and cookies.

This is the story of how a 20-year-old Japanese girl completely changed the lives for the better of this bootheel town. The article can be found in the magazine "Communities in Action," published by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

He changed his plea after Fielding Potashnich, prosecuting attorney for Scott County, presented the State's case.

Indian Homesites Being Uncovered In Mississippi County Area

JIM HOPGOOD, left, viewing several particles of pottery being uncovered by John Claggett and Howard Platz, both of Shelbina. The mound excavations of former Baytime Indian culture of almost 1000 years ago is located on highway 77 and county road MM and AA.

EAST PRAIRIE -- A group of Missouri University anthropology instructors, together with college and high school students, are excavating Indian burial grounds, and former homesites.

The digging is being done southeast of East Prairie on county highway MM. The first digging was done off highway 80 on route AA.

In charge of the excavation is James Hopgood, formerly of East Prairie and now assistant associate director of anthropology, University of Missouri; Ray Williams, research associate, department of anthropology, Missouri University.

In the first excavation on the Shell Island tract, the group uncovered a number of skeletons, consisting of two adults and a child, as well as a special infant burial ground. It was observed that a special burial process was observed; the infants had objects pressed against the back of their skulls to give the skull a more flattened shape.

The new digging on route MM is to explore the homes of the old Baytown Indian culture that roamed this area many centuries ago, before the coming of the later Indian tribes.

It has been found that the Baytown culture was a peaceful agricultural tribe. The homes are found to be in a circular fashion for their large meeting places. Many types of cooking ware made of pottery have been found.

In one spot were found charred walnuts, hickory nuts, hazel nuts, and also a bit of corn. The bottoms of floor dwellings are found at a depth of from 18 to 30 inches below the surface, and was along the former Mississippi river banks of centuries ago. The sites have been covered with a black loam, and the soil type varies from a dark to a lighter texture.

Accompanying the anthropologists are students from various states, all interested in the new findings. Among them are men who are well versed in assembling broken pottery of any early period of Indian civilization, as well as one who is well versed on bone structure of the inhabitants of the varying tribes.

Students found at the excavations this week were Howard Platz, Shelbina high school biology teacher; John Claggett, Kirksville college student; John Clark, University of Texas; John Rees, University of Chicago; Bobby Rappold, Hermann; Tom Dixon, Gary Loomis and Fred Jones, all of East Prairie high school.

The excavating of the sites is taking place on the Allen Brock farm, which is farmed by Paul Haney, East Prairie. The expenses for the project is being provided by the National Park Service and land leveling salvage.

The Hoecake area was the site of numerous diggings in the past two years. Many mounds were uncovered that were burial grounds.

Some of the instructors will continue the excavation to August, while Ray Williams will return in September, and continue the work through December.

New Support on Way for Area Wheat Farmers

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — Increased coverage, averaging 19 per cent, and a new premium discount plan for Missouri wheat farmers in 1967 were announced today by the Federal Crop Insurance Corp.

F. Reed Grainer, Missouri director for FCIC, said the increased wheat coverages are the result of an adjustment based on normal yield increases in the past 10 years due to technical improvements in farming.

He said substantial coverage increases have been set for all of the 47 counties where the wheat insurance program is in effect. In addition, nine counties have been made eligible for the 1967 crop year. They are Boone, Clinton, Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Platte, Randolph and Stoddard.

Grainer saw under the premium discount feature, policyholders who do not experience a loss for one year will be granted a five per cent premium discount for the second year. Previously, policyholders had to have a three-year good experience rating before receiving a discount.

He said the same discount feature also will apply to other crops-corn, tobacco, grain sorghum, soybeans and cotton.

This year the FCIC is providing crop insurance for more than 7,500 farmers in Missouri.

Whitfield Becomes A Twin Killer

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Fred Whitfield, the celebrated Yankee killer, has become a Minnesota murderer while clubbing Twins pitching like a wild Indian for a .455 average.

The 28-year-old Cleveland first baseman has rifled 20 hits in 44 tries in 11 games against Minnesota this season. His 1966 batting mark against New York, the team he has tormented since coming into the American League four years ago, is only .235.

Whitfield gunned three hits, including a two-run homer, and right-hander Steve Hargan fired blanks as the Indians scalped the Twins 4-0 Thursday.

In the only other AL games, league-leading Baltimore downed Kansas City 11-3 and Boston edged the Yanks 3-2.

In the National League, San Francisco beat Atlanta 3-1, Pittsburgh routed Houston 9-0 and Philadelphia defeated the New York Mets 1-0.

Whitfield, whose season's batting average is only .250, walloped his 12th homer after Chico Salmon singled in the eighth to clinch the Indians' victory. Earlier, Whitfield had singled home Jim Landis in the first inning, then singled and scored Cleveland's second run in the fourth.

Hargan, making only his third start of the year, allowed only one Minnesota runner to reach second. He struck out 10 and walked none. Jim Perry was the losing pitcher.

The Orioles collected 19 hits, including eight doubles, in crushing the A's and boosting their AL lead to four games over idle Detroit.

Baltimore roughed up Ralph Terry, Kansas City's starter, for three runs on five hits, including doubles by Frank Robinson and Luis Aparicio, in the opening inning and never were headed.

Carl Yastrzemski and Don Demeter were the latest Yankee killers. Yastrzemski doubled and scored on Demeter's single in the seventh inning, breaking a 2-2 tie for the Red Sox.

The Yanks had taken a 1-0 lead in the second and picked up another run in the fourth on Joe Pepitone's 14th home run. Boston tied it in the fifth and shelled Jim Bouton on an error, Rico Petrocelli's single, a fielder's choice, Yastrzemski's double and an infield hit by George Scott.

The victory went to Don McMahon, who checked the Yankees in the final three innings after Jim Lonborg was lifted for a pinch hitter in the sixth. Hal Reniff took the loss.

Yankee slugger Mickey Mantle, who had hammered two homers in each of the two previous games, walked three times and flied out in his other two trips.

The Cardinals also signed Samuel Charles Stewart, an outstanding athlete at Oklahoma Baptist University, to a contract with their Sarasota club of the Gulf Coast League, it was announced by Director of Scouting George Silvey.

Charley Stewart lettered in baseball, basketball and track at Oklahoma Baptist, had a three-year college batting average of .397, and stole 80 bases in 70 games.

Suggested Melody

The national anthem of the United States, "The Star-Spangled Banner," was first printed as a poem. Judge J. H. Nicholson, brother-in-law of Francis Scott Key, suggested that the poem should be sung to the tune of an old English drinking song, "To Anacreon in Heaven."

BELLS ON INDEPENDENCE DAY!

This year there will be many four-year-old Americans ringing bells on July Fourth, who will grow up believing that this was always the custom. Actually it was, from the first Independence Day till about a century ago when the sounds of peace were drowned out by the noise of war, and the day became celebrated only with firecrackers and rockets.

Writing a book a few years ago, the author unearthed the story about Independence Day bell-ringing, and he mentioned that "it seems with firecrackers disappearing we might well revive that early American custom." The idea quickly took hold, supported by organizations and churches and newspapers, it reached millions of people. In 1963 it was passed in Washington as Senate Concurrent Resolution 25, requesting that all American bells, public and private, church, school, fire, college and town bells ring simultaneously at 2 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time on July Fourth. Some places now ring bells for two minutes, others for four minutes along with many radio, TV programs, and even public loudspeakers in parks, racetracks, ball games and on ships at sea.

For the past three years the "Bells on Independence Day" project has been included in Governors' Fourth of July Proclamations, and this holiday which was losing much of its solemn significance, was rekindled into a day of bells ringing out America's birthday, just as it was in the beginning.

It has been said that a thing must be done four times before it becomes a habit, so this fourth year, for the revival of the early Amercan custom of ringing bells on Independence Day, is a most important one. Perhaps there will be no great bells within reach of your hearing, perhaps you will seem to be the only one ringing a small handbell; but you will know that all over the nation in every state, millions of bells will be ringing out the message of democracy and liberty.

A safer and less noisy pastime for children, let them ring bells on this day, proclaming it America's Birthday. And wherever we are, let us remember this greatest of American days with joy and reverence.

FOURTH OF JULY

The traditional Fourth of July our fathers and their fathers knew has largely gone from the land. Fireworks, save for organized, licensed displays, have been widely outlawed on grounds of safety. With them have gone the orations, once commonly held in town squares and fairgrounds in which leaders in government and enterprise paid their tributes to those who founded the nation, and who gave us the powers of mind and spirit which made possible the maintenance of our freedoms and the creation of material abundance.

These orators, needless to say, were often naive and flamboyant. But still, there was a profound merit in what they said and meant no matter how inept the choice of words might have been. They did paint a picture of the American ideal, the American philosophy, the American tradition. And even those who stayed but briefly to hear them felt stirrings of pride in our heritage.

All this is gone or generally so. The Fourth has become just one more holiday. And something vital, something that was at the heart of things, has gone out of the American life. It needs to be restored if we are to save this nation from lethargy and cynicism within, as well as from our enemies without. And it can be -- if, on this and every Fourth, we give a quiet moment to reflecting on the values our forebearers brought for us with blood and treasure. We must determine to do all we can to defend those values and pass them on, untarnished, to our children and our children's children.

Every woman who "jaws" a man is a fool. Women cannot control men in that way. A Sikeston woman took a wreck of a man, and made a good citizen out of him. We know another Sikeston wife whose husband was drifting off. She set about to save him. She did it, and he loves her now as he should. She never spoke a cross word to him. It is easy to be a blackguard, but it requires genius to be a lady.

FRANCE'S BOMB

Speculation in Paris places the first in a new series of tests of the French atomic bomb on Saturday (July 2).

FOR MORE THAN A YEAR the word has been given out that France would test its first hydrogen bomb southeast of Papeete, capital of Tahiti, in July 1966. Now the predictions are zeroing in on Saturday, providing conditions are right.

Speculation was heightened on June 24, when France's minister for overseas territories, Gen. Pierre Billotte, flew from Paris for Papeete. He was to leave after a few days in the capital of Tahiti for a tour of Pacific possessions of the French. Paris Presse said the General would go to Mururoa in the Tuamotu Archipelago, 800 miles east of Tahiti, which is to be the site of the new series of bomb tests.

President Charles de Gaulle, now in the Soviet Union, is also expected to observe one of the tests. He is reported to be planning to stop off on a projected trip to Cambodia in the autumn.

THE FRENCH NUCLEAR CAPACITY is more embarrassing to France's allies than ominous. France is officially a member of the 18-nation United Nations Disarmament Committee which has been meeting for so long in the Palais des Nations in Geneva. However, France has taken no part in the deliberations there.

Neither France nor Red China is party to the existing test ban agreement. President de Gaulle has insisted on building a French nuclear force de frappe (striking force) on the ground that "American nuclear power does not necessarily meet all the eventualities concerning Europe and France."

The now moribund American proposal for a multilateral North Atlantic Treaty Organization nuclear force of missile-bearing ships was scorned from the beginning by De Gaulle. The French President saw it as an Anglo-American scheme to thwart France's national nuclear program. Whether by design or not, De Gaulle's policy of national independence has clashed with American foreign policy in almost every part of the world. De Gaulle's goal, reiterated time and again, is a free and independent Europe that could act as a counterbalance to the Soviet and American superpowers.

In this country there is a great tendency to charge all of NATO's shortfallings to De Gaulle. But as recently as May 24, Alexandre Sanguinetti, the French Minister of Veterans Affairs, charged that the United States balked all French attempts to have NATO reformed. "Our ambassador tried to broach the subject," Sanguinetti said, "but we ran up against not only a brick wall but absolute silence."

DE GAULLE has openly expressed dissatisfaction with NATO since his return to power in 1958. In September of that year he proposed in letters to British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and U. S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles that France, Britain, and the United States become a formally constituted NATO "political directorate." The scheme was turned down rather promptly, and since then De Gaulle has gradually disengaged France from the Atlantic Alliance.

In any realistic sense, the French nuclear potential, as contrasted with that of either of the atomic superpowers, must be viewed as something like the ability of a bee to sting an elephant. However, stampedes have been caused by smaller events than stings, and so long as the capacity does exist, it has to be viewed as part of De Gaulle's grand strategy, which can be described, depending on the point of view, as grandeur or chantage -- blackmail.

IN THE NEWS

The symbol "14 (b)" is destined to play a leading part in the news of the near future. It is the designation given to the section of the Taft-Hartley Act which authorizes the states, if they so wish, to pass Right-To-Work laws.

These laws simply say that it is up to each worker to decide for himself whether he wishes or does not wish to join a union. If he decides not to join, he cannot be discharged from his job for that reason. Coercion cannot be applied by either the union or the employer.

On the side of public policy, the laws honor freedom of association --the freedom of any person to join or not join a club, a civic group, a political organization or anything else. And the right to join or not join a union is certainly more basic than any of these.

On the purely practical side, Right-To-Work makes for better, more effective unions. They must sell themselves to the membership on the basis of service, instead of a basis of compulsion. A good union has no difficulty in enlisting members-- it provides a dollar's worth of return for each dollar of dues. Only the indifferent, ineffective or corrupt union needs to fear "14 (b)".

YOU MEAN -----
DRIVE SAFELY?

The latest plan for solving the transportation problem and relieving highway traffic jams is to have people ride in their own cars ON A TRAIN.

How about THAT?

The federal government is working with railroads on the scheme and it will be tested soon between New York and Chicago.

If it clicks, motorists will catch the train at rail yards in the outskirts of cities. They will drive their cars up ramps onto two-decker rail-cars, stay in their autos and leave the driving to Gus, the train engineer.

The cost will be less than 10 cents a mile. Only the driver pays. The rest of the family rides free.

The backers are concerned lest auto passengers be tummy-troubled by the roll and sway of the train. But they must realize this is not the only problem.

What they actually have to whip are such toughies as:

. What fun will it be to go 85 miles an hour if you're not exceeding the speed limit?

. How is the backseat driver going to get the message to the locomotive engineer that he's a clod at the throttle?

. How can the family turn around and go back home to make sure mom really did turn off the electric iron?

O.K., O.K., so maybe I'm going a little fast. You want you should be on Social Security before we get there? And pipe down, you kids. You had your chance when we stopped back there. Wow -- look at that idiot trying to pass us! O.K., mister, you asked for it. How do you like .....

McNAMARA: U.S. SOUL-SEARCHER

In Montreal, speaking before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, he roamed over such matters as the real bases for peace in this world, the uses of military and economic power, the challenge of the merging nations, bridge-building between us and China.

He endorsed the idea that the inequities of the present Selective Service system be remedied by asking every young person to give one or two years of service to his country in some capacity.

The man who his critics allege has a computer where his heart should be waxed philosophical over the nature of man:

". . . . a rational animal -- but with a near infinite capacity for folly . . . He draws blueprints for Utopia but never quite gets it built. In the end, he plugs away obstinately with the only building material really ever at hand: His own part-comic, part-tragic, part-cussed but part-glorious nature."

These are not the words of an unfeeling efficiency expert. Nor are these:

In Pittsburgh a few days later, McNamara said something that should be posted on the wall of every classroom in the country:

"Let us be perfectly clear about our principles and our priorities. This is a nation in which the freedom of dissent is absolutely fundamental."

Even as he spoke, anti-Viet Nam war pickets marched and chanted outside the building.

Can anyone imagine the secretary's counterpart in the Kremlin, or anywhere else in the Communist world, talking in this manner about war and peace, the nature of man, the necessity of dissent? For that matter, can anyone imagine the picketing?

It is good to criticize ourselves for our collective faults and failings, to expose our mistakes and constantly reassess the direction of our policies and programs -- in short, never to cease our national soul-searching.

But we also need to be reminded once in a while that there IS funamental difference between totalitarian and democratic societies. It is a difference measured by the ideals each society cultivates, the degree of human liberty each affords, the demands for informed responsibility each makes on its citizens, the scope for the realization of individual aspirations each allows.

Not least of all, it is a difference that is apparent in the type of leaders each produces and the kind of words they can say.

Thank you, Mr. McNamara for reminding us. Now, about the mess in Viet Nam .....

SOUTH IS DRESSIER

There's Good News from the popular winter resorts in Florida and the Caribbean. While there has been no diminishing of the effort to be casual and comfortable while vacationing in the South, there's less of the beachcomber look-- and much more of the sports-wear-dress up look than ever before. Inasmuch as these resorts are usually a testing ground for the clothes you will be offered next summer, the aforementioned change is significant and welcome.

"A MAJORITY ONCE KNEW THE WORLD WAS FLAT"

The Supreme Court decision holding that all state legislatures--the upper as well as the lower houses--must be apportioned solely on the basis of population hit the states like a bombshell. And it is going to keep on exploding for a long time to come.

For all of our history, it has been common for the states to apportion their House of Representatives on a population basis and their Senates on a geographical basis, such as by counties. In this they have simply followed the federal system, as laid down in the Constitution, in which each member of the lower house represents about the same number of constituents, while every state is allowed two Senators without regard to population.

Unless this court decision is negated--and a constitutional amendment, apparently, is the only way to do that--the big centers of population will almost completely dominate state government, at the expense of the rural areas and rural people. Their problems and needs, which often are different from those of the cities, will be submerged and their voices largely stilled. A braking power on the excesses of numerical majorities will be lost.

The argument for this revolutionary reapportionment is that the majority should rule. Washington columnist Patrick Fox had something impressive to say about that: "If a simple majority were always right, there would be no problem in letting it vote its way immediately on everything.

"But a majority once knew the world was flat. A majority opposed the American revolution."

TWO CENTURIES OF AMERICAN LIBERTY

The Fourth of July this year will bring us to just ten years from the end of the second century of American Liberty, the bicentennial of our national independence. Let us hope that it will be honored with all the joy, the pageantry and the ceremony that it deserves, and that discerning men will by then have no cause to fear that our liberty may be destroyed from within.

The awareness and celebration of the great events in its heritage is vital to preserving our nation or any nation. This is an age when more and more confused persons ask: Why am I here? What can I do? What is the purpose of my country in the world? A knowledge and honoring of our proud history can help answer those questions, sounding what Abraham Lincoln called "the mystic chords of memory."

The American Revolution, which gave us our liberty, was not only a pivotal but a unique event in all history. No other nation was ever deliberately created at a given time and place, by men of profound wisdom, to give the greatest possible degree of freedom to the individual. In other countries which have known freedom, it was won only gradually over the centuries in long, bitter struggle. To us it was given full-blown.

Already we have passed through the two hundredth anniversary of one of the great events leading to the American Revolution: the repeal of the Stamp Act. Yet it has hardly been mentioned to the public. If we forget our history, then history will assuredly in time forget us. HLH

But that's how Francis Barry became a millionaire.

At 58, self-made as any man can be, he is a major power on the New York waterfront. He is the president and chief owner of three shipping companies — the Circle Line, which carries sightseers around Manhattan; the Statue of Liberty ferry, and the famed Old Hudson River Day Line.

"Last year our 15 vessels carried about 2½ million passengers," said Barry, not without pride. That's almost three times as many as entered or left the port of New York by sea.

Son of a stevedore who finally achieved an Irish immigrant's dream of glory by buying his own saloon, Barry was born and raised here in Hell's Kitchen where a lad to survive had to be quick on his feet and fast with his fists.

"We never had any money," he said, "but since the neighbors weren't too well-heeled it didn't matter. I suppose we were poor but didn't know it.

"We lived in an old cold-water tenement that's still standing. Every Saturday morning a man would come out of the barber shop downstairs and throw 20 or 30 pennies in the air.

"What a scramble! That was the big day of the week for us kids."

Barry isn't a high school dropout. He never got that far. He reached his educational peak at 13, when he finished parochial school.

"I played Abraham Lincoln in the graduation play, was elected president of the class, and ran the 75- and 100-yard dash," he recalled.

"I had a scholarship to high school but felt I couldn't afford to take it."

Barry, who had been pushing trunks part-time through the clothing district since he was 10, felt he was in clover when he landed a $12-a-week job as a messenger for the U. S. Customs Service.

But 10 years later he had worked up to $100 a month. Neighbors thought he was out of his mind when he left the government payroll to work for a customs brokerage firm.

In a few years, Barry became a partner and then sole owner of one of the largest customs brokerage firms in the nation representing some 33 steamship lines. He surprised others in the field by taking in three partners and giving them a 49 per cent interest in the firm.

"It pays to keep good men with you," he remarked. "That's better than having to compete against them."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Democracy may be bogging down in many parts of the world, but in the highest country of the Western Hemisphere -- Bolivia-- it is thriving.

This weekend, Bolivia is holding presidential elections on a slam-bang truly Democratic basis, with every village in the isolated Altiplano, some of them 13,000 feet above sea level, getting a chance to vote.

Especially significant is the fact that the former president of Bolivia, Gen. Rene Barrientos, who seized power in November, 1964, has stepped down from office and is taking his chances with every other candidate on reelection.

Barrientos has taken a leaf from the North American campaign methods, has hired a Fairchild helicopter, and is visiting villages which have never seen helicopters before, let alone a presidential candidate.

He faces a battery of big-name opponents from every walk of Bolivian political life. They are:

VICTOR ANDRADE, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, and longtime Ambassador in Washington where he won many friends. Andrade is running on the MNR (National Revolutionary Movement) ticket, which represents the former government.

GEN. BERNARDINO BILBOA-RIOJA, who represents the Falange or socialist party.

FELIPE INGUEZ, candidate of the Communist party.

A total of 1,200,000 Bolivians are registered to vote, the largest number in history, and the candidates for the senate and assembly include a cross section of tin miners, peasants and Indians.

Gen. Barrientos took over when President Paz, a former school teacher, made the mistake of running for a third term, in violation of the Bolivian constitution. Paz had been a good president during his first term, lost popularity in his second term, then changed the constitution so he could run for a third term. That finished him.

Barrientos studied under the U. S. Air Force at Maxwell Field, Ala., and Rantoul Field, Ill. There, he saw something of American democracy at work, and back in Bolivia he is trying to hold completely free and fair elections.

The Bolivian elections, together with the recent free and fair election in the Dominican Republic, constitute important pluses for democracy in the Americas.

POLITICAL TOLERANCE

Col. Jack Arvey, onetime political boss of Chicago, telephoned David Lawrence, ex-governor of Pennsylvania, the other day to ask: "Can a Jew be elected governor of Pennsylvania?"

Arvey referred to the campaign of Milton Shapp, who has been nominated as the democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania.

Lawrence, a Democrat and the first Catholic governor of Pennsylvania in history, knows something of the problems of racial intolerance in a political campaign. He replied: "I think he can."

Lawrence went on to tell Arvey of the tremendous impression Shapp made on Catholic voters in the democratic primary, even though Shapp was running against a Catholic candidate, Robert Casey.

"He put on a documentary film telling about his life," Lawrence said. "He covered everything. It took him from a young Jewish boy in the slums of Cleveland to the building up of his electronics company. It was a real American success story."

Lawrence told how a straw vote had been taken at Cathedral high school in Pittsburgh, a Catholic school, and how Shapp had carried it against Casey.

In the democratic primary the democratic organization had been opposed to Shapp and for Casey. Nevertheless, Lawrence pointed out that not one county chairman, mayor or congressman in charge of the organization campaign had been able to carry the Catholic and Protestant districts. They were carried by Shapp, a Jew.

Though Shapp was critical of the democratic machine during his campaign, he has now come to Washington to meet with Lawrence, had breakfast with Mayor Joseph Barr of Pittsburgh and is bringing dissident elements of the democratic party together.

Shapp is running against Republican Raymond Shafer, now lieutenant governor. The race is so hot that the politicians are wisecracking: "Shafer will have to go to California to take lessons from Ronald Reagan."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Senate Racket Committee and FBI Zero In On New Bomb and Gun Terror Inside Labor.

Washington, D. C.: -- Drumbeats of bullets, burning of cars, brass knuckle beatings, truly brutal bullying of businessmen and now the bombing of two clean - cut Chicago unionists are tracing a bloody pattern of violence inside labor across the U.S.

At least 10 union officials - or rank and filers who have dared to dig up the muck -- have been murdered or mauled and mayhemed.

For years, until recently, this gruesome violence has been dormant as racket probe followed racket probe.

But now it's business as it usually was. Senator McClellan's investigators, burdened by other backbreaking probes, understaffed and underfinanced, nonetheless are looking into the lethal epidemic of killings and terror inside some of the nation' least publicized but most powerful unions.

What has angered the Senator and his staff is the sadistic bombing in Chicago of a car owned by Dominic Abata, head of the taxi division of Paul Hall's Seafarers' International Union.

It was the old Chicago business of dynamite wired in under the hood of the auto. Young Joe Longmeyer, a clean - cut kid doing a public relations job for what is known as DUOC -- Democratic Union Organizing Committee -- started the car, set off the blast. At least one leg was horribly mangled. The other man in the car is one of Paul Hall's field organizers.

It is no secret that husky Paul Hall, international president of the seafarers, has long fought the mobs in the big cities, along the waterfronts, and over in Puerto Rico.

He is the AFL-CIO vice-president with the guts and physical stamina to make the fight. And it may yet make him president of the AFL-CIO, which has real need of his brand of fearless vibrancy.

It was Paul Hall who directed the fight which took 6,000 Chicago taxi drivers from the hands of Joey Glimco's Teamster Local 777. The men drive for the Yellow and Checker Cab Companies.

"Little Joey" is a tough man with a record of 36 arrests. And not the least of his notoriety springs from sworn testimony before the McClellan Senate Rackets Committee to the effect that he is one of the 19 rulers of syndicate crime in Chicago.

It is the hallmark of Paul Hall's courage that this seafarers' chief has gone into Chicago regularly to do battle.

He was there as recently as a month ago, holding public hearings inside the DUOC to air grievances; writing letters to the hackies asking them to come forward with complaints; building a democratic structure in a bloody swamp.

Since then he has returned to his Brooklyn headquarters, and now is in Washington to fight for a larger American merchant marine.

And two of the men he left in the field have been bombed. He makes no accusation. He has not asked for help from the federal government.

Nonetheless, squads of FBI men zeroed in on the bombing area within an hour after the blast had hurled the two crusaders onto the grim Chicago street.

The Justice Dept. and the FBI want to take a "long look at this entire thing in Chicago." That's the way they put it.

No one is accusing anyone of anything. That's definite.

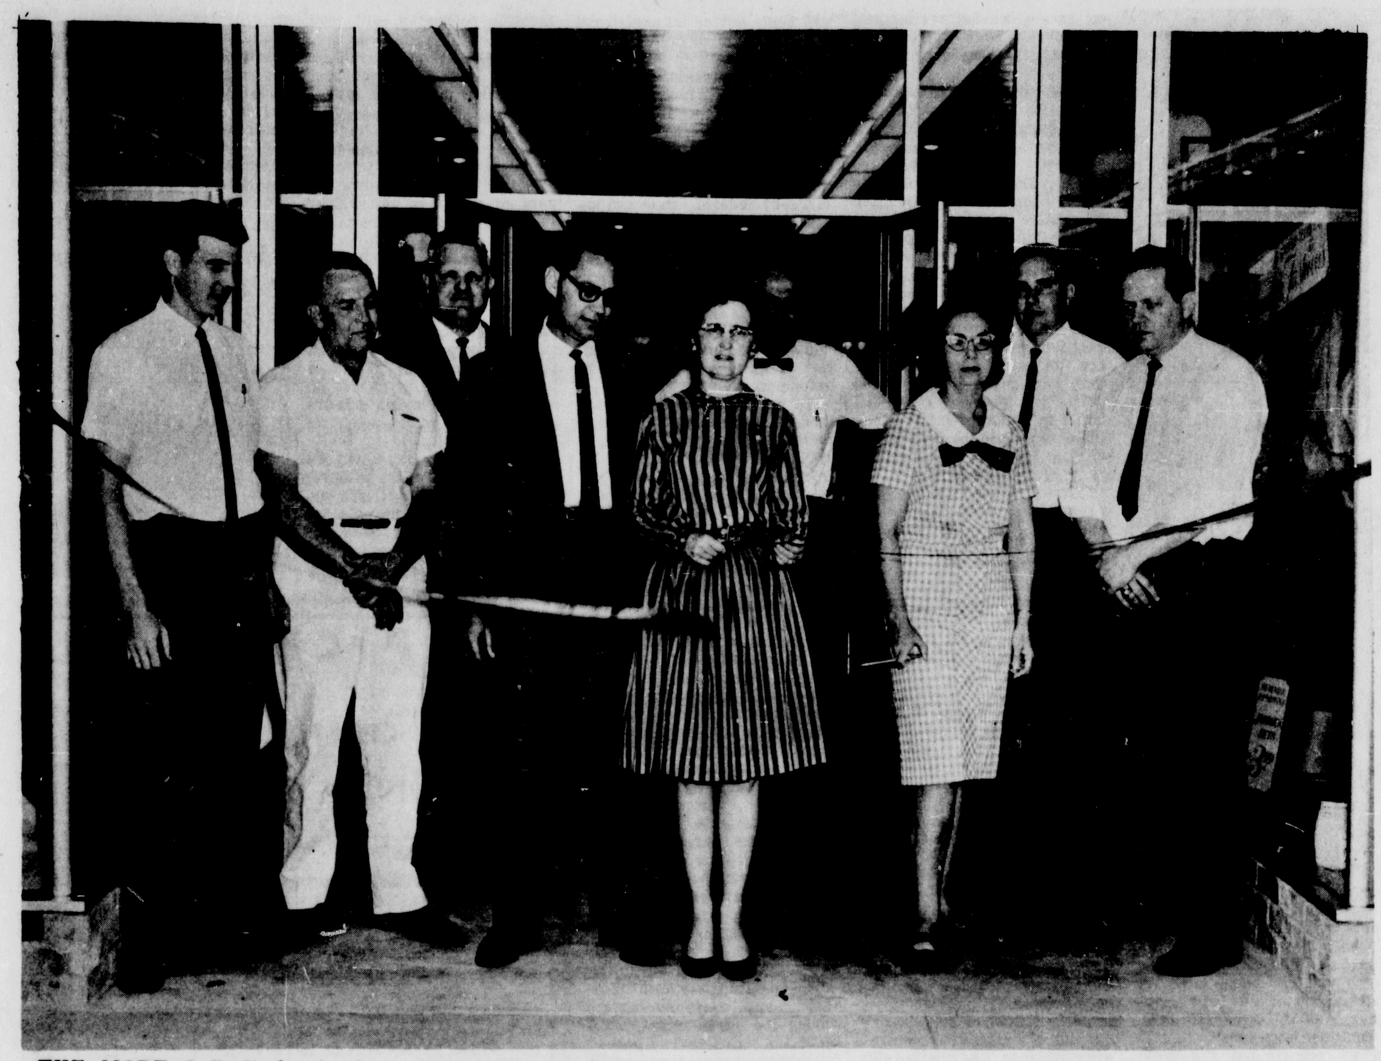

What the Justice Dept. wants to know, and what the FBI is probing and what Senator McClellan's men are seeking, is "the why" of some of Chicago labor.

Here it is 1966 and a Joey Glimco still is head of a teamsters union -- Local 777. He is active in teamster politics. He has influence in allied unions there. He has affected the dispatch of delegates to the teamsters' Miami Beach Convention. He is the object of the Grand Jury investigation.

An atmosphere has been perpetrated and perpetuated. People hearing of bombings yawn. It's all like a movie flashback to the twenties and thirties. It's no one labor man's fault, and it's everyone's fault that labor itself has not gone in and cleaned up.

Now there will be new trials and new racket hearings. And there will be outcries from inside labor.

But what of the cries of pain of those cut down, of those with shattered legs and of those helpless in the tourniquet of terror?

Medicare Answers You Need to Know

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are answers to some of the questions most frequently asked about medicare, starting today for all Americans 65 and older:

Q. If the hospital I choose is overcrowded, does medicare guarantee me a bed?

A. No. Medicare just helps pay the bill.

Q. If I have to go back into the hospital two or more times, do I pay the $40 "deductible" each time?

A. No. You pay just the first $40 of hospital charges in each "spell of illness."

Q. What's a "spell of illness."

A. To medicare it's a period of time, not an ailment. It starts the day you enter a hospital. It ends 60 days after your discharge from the hospital. Or from a nursing home — after next Jan. 1, medicare will provide posthospital convalescent care in nursing homes for those needing it.

Q. Suppose I go back to the hospital for a different sickness?

A. To medicare it doesn't matter. It's all one "spell of illness" if the new admission comes within 60 days of the last discharge.

Q. Do I have to go back to the same hospital?

A. No. Your benefits follow you from hospital to hospital and from city to city. Just show your red, white and blue card. Any participating hospital can tell instantly, by check to a computer in Baltimore, Md., whether you have used up all your "benefit days."

Q. If I'm in a hospital when medicare starts, does medicare pick up the bill?

A. Not for past days. Medicare picks up as of July 1, and you'll still have to pay the $40 deductible as well as the charges for the days preceding medicare.

Q. I've signed up to pay $3 a month for the voluntary doctor bill insurance. It has a $50 deductible; how often do I have to pay that?

A. Just once each year, regardless of how much your doctor bills add up to in a year.

Q. Should I cancel my old health insurance policy?

A. If you are 65 but your wife is not, she's not covered by medicare. You may want to keep her policy in force.

Q. We are both over 65. Should we buy the "supplemental" plans offered to over-65 persons by Blue Cross, Blue Shield and other private insurers for additional protection?

A. That depends on your own needs and inclinations. Some policies are designed to cover medicare's "deductibles" and provide benefits beyond the limits of medicare. Another type of policy pays off in cash benefits for each day of hospitalization; the money could be used for the inevitable costs of an illness, or for "extras," such as a bedside telephone or a private room instead of the semiprivate accommodations paid for by medicare.

Q. Medicare's doctor bill insurance covers 80 per cent of a doctor's "reasonable charges," after the $50 deductible. Does the doctor send his bill to medicare or to me?

A. Either one. He can send it to medicare's local "intermediary" agency — in most cities, the local Blue Shield organization — which will pay him 80 per cent of what it deems a "reasonable charge" for his treatment or operation; the other 20 per cent would come for you. Or he could send the whole bill directly to you.

Q. In the latter case what do I do?

A. Pay it, then apply for reimbursement to the "intermediary."

By MARTHA COLE

WASHINGTON (AP)—A sabbatical leave for a college art teacher, research on a strawberry disease, a study of cancer drugs, a job for a school dropout, a new park in Honolulu.

For these, and scores of others each day, there are federal grants in aid.

Announcements from the federal departments and agencies show the interest in the cultural life, a beautiful America, space, the poor, the elderly, the handicapped, the jobless, education. The list goes on.

The government spends billions in grants each year. They go to states, counties, communities, colleges and research institutions. Generally, they are matched by local funds, sometimes 50-50. Sometimes the government pays two-thirds or three-fourths.

A check of one day—last Wednesday — on announcements from government agencies about grants turned up this sampling: The Department of Housing and Urban Development announced grants of almost $134 million to help urban mass transportation projects. Example: Cleveland got almost $7 million for an extension to its airport.

The department granted $554,091 to Honolulu for parks in the city's urban renewal projects.

The National Endowment for the Arts approved up to 50 sabbatical leave grants of $7,500 each for teaching artists in colleges and universities.

The Department of Agriculture made a $115,000 grant to Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research, Inc., Yonkers, N.Y., for a four-year study of resistance of strawberries to red stele disease.

The Public Health Service announced it has committed more than $2 million for the next five years for research at Yale University School of Medicine on how cancer drugs work.

The Commerce Department had grants to help build vocational schools, sewage plants, a town library and a community hospital.

And up at the Capitol, the Senate Agriculture Committee voted to expand the grants for the school lunch program, while the House Rules Committee cleared for floor action the grants of the antipoverty program.

Ky Says Bombing May End War by Jan. 1

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP -- Premier Nguyen Cao Ky said today the U.S. bombing of North Vietnamese fuel installations may bring the war to an end by Jan. 1.

"I am pleased about this action, I have been advocating it for a long time," Ky told newsmen at the Bien Hoa airbase 15 miles from here where he presided over South Viet Nam's Air Force Day ceremonies. "I am not recommending the bombing of populated areas, but all strategic areas must be attacked."

Sad Day for Mississippi

By JOHN HALL

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi, the first state to ratify national prohibition in 1918, today ended the last statewide ban on liquor in the United States with an ironic touch.

One bootlegger—a man of unknown years who goes by the name Red Hydrick—is flatly disgusted with the change. Hydrick is probably the best-known bootlegger in central Mississippi.

Although liquor became legal at 12:01 a.m., it won't really be legal until a county votes itself wet—which will take at least 16 days.

Gov. Paul B. Johnson has vowed strict compliance with statewide enforcement of prohibition until such referendums are held. It was Johnson who called for legalization earlier this year, terming prohibition a farce.

Red Hydrick sat in his bootlegger shack on the banks of the muddy Pearl River in Rankin County across from Jackson late Thursday night, surveyed the bare, unpainted wooden shelves, two empty bourbon bottles, and rasped:

"I've been in this building 27 years and I've gone through hell. There has been a lot of money taken in the front door of this shack, but through the hazards of this racket, there has been a lot go out through the back door."

Hydrick, like all the other illegal sellers of bonded booze, was closing up.

He's made no plans for the future. Most bootleggers are going along with the 16-day dry spell because the new Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has vowed that anyone caught selling during the interim won't get a legal license.

Beer has been legal in the state for years—on a local option basis. And beer is all that will be allowed until counties vote themselves wet.

Thus, for a time, Mississippi's $36-million annual illegal liquor business has been halted. Under the old system, the state collected nearly $1 million annually in a black-market tax on booze.

Modern Cowboys Start Herd Moving Toward Kansas

ALTUS, Okla. (AP) — Fresh from a victorious Indian "battle" and a night of dancing, barbecuing and roping, a group of Texas cowpokes and their 93 Longhorn cattle moved out today toward Dodge City, Kan.

The group left San Antonio, Tex., last Sunday and is due in Dodge City Saturday. The drive is to mark the 100th anniversary of the trail drives after the Civil War.

Texas Lt. Gov. Preston Smith rode ahead of the group as it crossed into Oklahoma over the Red River and was met by Oklahoma Lt. Gov. Leo Winters.

Six Indians in warpaint also met the party but the cowboys drove them off, just like in the movies.

After getting into Oklahoma, the cattle were trucked to Altus, paraded down main street and to a rodeo enclosure. The cowboys took part in the barbecue, square dancing and roping contests.

Mother Drowns 3 Children For 2nd Time in 12 Years

FAIRFIELD, Maine (AP) — Three young children were found drowned in their rural home Thursday, in what was almost a duplication of a tragedy 12 years ago when their mother was committed in the drowning of her first three children.

Police said they would seek a murder warrant today against the mother, Constance Fisher, 37.

The bodies were found by the father, Carl Fisher, 45, when he came home from work. In March 1954, he had come home from work, from the same job, to find the first three children dead.

Both times he found his wife unconscious. The first time the children were 6 years, 4 years, and 11 months old. This time, the children were 6 years, 4 years and 9 months old.

Mrs. Fisher was taken to Thayer Hospital in Waterville Thursday night, where she regained consciousness. A hospital spokesman said she appear to be in good condition. She was under police guard.

Police Chief Frederick Gould said three pill boxes were found empty Thursday. He said Mrs. Fisher had taken an overdose of medication. He also said a note was found, but did not disclose its contents.

Twelve years ago, Mrs. Fisher attempted suicide, officials said, by drinking hair shampoo. She left a note then, saying she had killed the children because "God told me to do it," and saying, "They are in heaven, safe from evil."

She was charged with murder then and committed to the State Hospital in Augusta. A grand jury refused to indict her after the hospital reported she was insane.

A hospital spokesman said today that Mrs. Fisher was released March 6, 1959, and that there apparently was no indication of any potential recurrence of her illness.

The father told police he returned home from his job in the car shops of the Maine Central Railroad in Waterville about 5 p.m. Thursday.

He found his 9-month-old daughter, Nathalie Rose lying face down in about 1½ inches of water in the bathtub.

Fisher ran about a quarter of a mile to the nearest home with a telephone, the home of Howard Wood, to summon help.

He and police then found Kathleen Louise, 6, and Michael Jon, lying under blankets in a bed. He found his wife on a bed.

An autopsy by Dr. Irving Goodof, Waterville pathologist, showed the three had drowned. Dr. Maurice Philbrick, county medical examiner, placed the time of death at about 7 a.m. Thursday.

The father was reported in seclusion with friends.

BONNER, Mont. AP -- A woman dropped her sandal in the Blackfoot River Thursday and three youngsters drowned trying to retrieve it.

John Fitzpatrick, 28, of Twin Creeks, Mont., who dived in to rescue the children, also drowned.

The children were Rose Ann Elledge, 15, Deer Lodge, Mont.; Terry Pesanti, 12, Twin Creeks, Mont. and Michael Fitzpatrick, 8, of Andover, Mass. All four bodies were recovered.

Missoula County undersheriff Russell Pulliam said Mrs. John Fitzpatrick lost her sandal in the river. Terry Pesanti leaped into the river first, followed by the other youngsters.

Head Start Brings $3.4 Million Into State

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Missouri communities have received $3,473,181 to operate "Head Start" programs for preschool children this summer.

Philip V. Maher, administrative assistant for urban affairs, said today 18,000 children from low income families will be benefitted. The program includes preparation for school, medical and dental examinations, one hot meal a day and parental participation.

The eight-week program will operate in 128 centers. Funds this year are $1,309,466 more than Missouri got last year under this phase of the Economic Opportunity program.

Mrs. Jimmie Goins

Laverne Garrison Is Wed To Jimmie Goins

POPLAR BLUFF--The Faith Tabernacle was the scene of the June 12 wedding of Laverne Garrison and Jimmie Goins.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C C. Garrison of Vanduser and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Goins of Poplar Bluff.

The Rev. Louise Copeland read the vows of the double ring ceremony before a white altar at 2 p.m.

Mrs. Steele, organist and friend of the bride, provided the pre-nuptial music.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. Her gown was white satin covered with white floral lace. The sleeves formed lily points over her wrists. Tiers of sheer white net formed the full front of her gown and the back skirt flowed into a long chapel-length train of lace. She chose a shoulder-length veil of white bridal net encircling a crown of pearls and sequins.

The former Miss Garrison carried a bouquet of white carnations from which flowed streamers tied in lovers' knots.

Miss Revelle Garrison, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Miss Merletta Hays and Miss Barbara McRoy, friends of the bride, were bridesmaids. They wore blue chiffon, street-length dresses featuring full skirts, the bodices were fitted and styled with long sleeves. Their headpieces were blue pearl caps with nose tip blue veils.

The bride's mother wore a blue street-length dress with black accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother wore a beige suit with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Broader Lunch, Milk Measures Win Support

WASHINGTON (AP)—A broad expansion of the federal school lunch and milk programs won unanimous backing of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

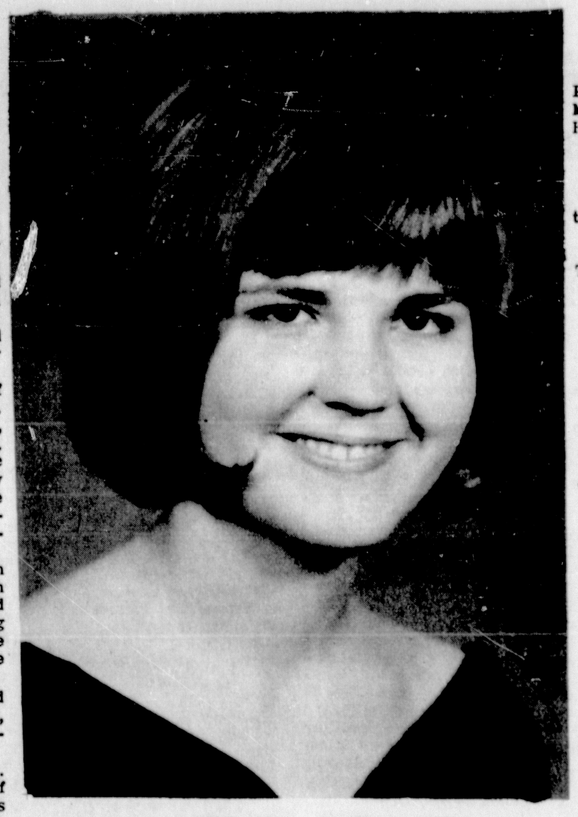

Chairman Allen J. Ellender, D-La., worked out a compromise with Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman which will permit a two-year test of a new school breakfast program.

It also will permit use of federal funds for the first time to help pay local costs for food preparation, storing and serving equipment in needy school districts previously unable to share in the nationwide lunch and milk programs.

The pilot school breakfast programs would be limited to two years with $7.5 million the first and $10 million the second.

Both the House and a Senate appropriations sub committee have rejected President Johnson's efforts to cut back the programs by several million dollars in the fiscal year which begins Friday.

The President asked a reduction from $103 to $21 million in the milk fund; but the Senate bill would authorize up to $110 million next year, $115 million for the second period and $120 million for the following two years.

The sun beat down on the staging area. The men sat in cloistered groups around the field. It was very hot, and there was no shade to offer any respite so the most they could do for relief was to lay their helmets to one side, and unbutton their shirts, in order to take advantage of any possible breeze.

I sat inside the door of a helicopter, and because of the protection from the sun this gave me, I felt slightly self-conscious for having a better place to wait, than did these men. We were eating breakfast, and for the men, this was the first of many C ration meals they would have during the coming operation, it would however, by my only C ration meal of the day. The box I held was marked "MEAL, INDIVIDUAL, B-2 unit, HAM AND LIMA BEANS." It also contained fruit cake, (which I exchanged for pears). There was an accessory kit containing one book of waterproof matches, four pieces of Chicklets chewing gum, two packages of instant coffee, one package of sugar, one of salt, a pack of cigarettes (4 in the pack), marked "NOT TO BE SOLD", and one tightly rolled packet of toilet tissue. I opened the meal with my P-38 can opener, which is a small finger operated can opener that I keep attached to my dog tag chain.

Someone came around handing out mail to several of the men, and I watched one as he read his letter. He was about twenty - five yards away from me, and he didn't know I was observing him as he read. He held the letter securely in front of him and read with such an intensity, that it looked as if he were trying to dissolve into the written pages. His eyes were glued to the pages, and his lips moved slightly. He was totally oblivious to the inevitable horseplay going on around him. I found myself wondering a little about him. He seemed so young! This time last year, I mused, he was probably pestering his father for the use of the car, to go to Graduation Prom, or some such event. He looked as if he should be worrying about whether his school would have a winning season in football, rather than preparing for a combat assault.

The GRF had begun now, and once over the LZ, there was the normal radio chatter pinpointing gun positions, calling for one element to close, calling for gun - ship support, etc. The gun - ships darted around like snake doctors beside water. They were firing rockets, 20 and 40mm rounds, and spraying machine gun fire into Charlie's positions. We spotted a VC firing from a cement bunker, and our right door gunner hit him with about a five second burst. Scratch one VC!

Finally, the helicopters discharged all their loads, (our helicopter doesn't carry troops, only equipment for making on the spot repair of aircraft, or to rig them for sling removal), and we left the area to return to home base.

I have moved from my original field position, and now live in a building right outside the gate of Tan Son Nhut Air Base. My building is next door to the hospital, and on nights that it doesn't rain, they show movies on the hospital lawn. I was waiting for the movie to start, when an ambulance arrived. They began off - loading the wounded from that morning's operation.

I stepped to one side to allow them to pass with one of the men. His shirt was off, and his pants had been loosened. There was a blood soaked bandage around his stomach. He was barefoot, and his boots hung from one end of the stretcher. A third medic walked alongside, holding up a bottle of a clear liquid, which was slowly draining into the wounded soldier.

When I looked at his face, I noted that his expression was one of confused curiosity, rather than fear of pain. He was about the same age as the young man I had seen reading the letter earlier that morning. It would have come as no surprise to me, if he had indeed been the same man. (I will never call them boys, they have all been deprived of their boyhood, and whether they are ready or not, or whether they want it or not, they have been thrust, some bleeding, some screaming with pain, some even dying into manhood.)

These men did not rush forward with exuberent patriotism, the war here is not a game for them. It is not something gloriously exciting, but is something that they know must be done, and they take no pleasure in hot, lonely, most always tedious, and frequently very frightening job.

Draft Study Urges Taking Young First

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON (AP)—A long-awaited Defense Department study concluded today that the draft should be redesigned to induct the youngest eligible men first and not men nearest 26—"those who are the most settled in their careers."

The change would shift the emphasis to the 19-20 age bracket.

"Combat commanders prefer the younger age group" the study said, "and about eight of 10 volunteers are in the age group under 20."

The study, presented to the House Armed Services Committee by Asst. Secretary of Defense Thomas D. Morris, made these other principal points:

—The United States can not look forward to discontinuing the draft in the next decade unless changing world conditions reduce needs substantially below the force levels required since Korea.

—An all-volunteer force cannot be justified because it would cost anywhere between $4 billion and $17 billion to increase military pay enough to attract the volunteers needed even for a pre-Viet Nam force of 2.7 million. More than 3 million are in service now.

—The present deferment system is "basically sound."

Morris, in charge of manpower for the Defense Department, testified as the committee wound up its hearings into the operations of the Selective Service System.

Cotton Research Bill Passes Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The House completed congressional action on a bill to set up a grower-financed program of research and promotion for cotton. The bill now goes to President Johnson.

The program would be financed by a checkoff system in which growers would be assessed $1 a bale at the time they sell their cotton. Growers not desiring to participate could get their money returned after several months.

The program would not become effective until after hearings called by the Secretary of Agriculture and after a referendum of cotton growers.

A STORM sewer project is nearing completion at the east edge of East Prairie. Shown is a small section of the five-foot drainage pipe. The sewer starts at the Methodist church and runs for 3/4 of a mile to the east edge of the school property. When completed it will solve the heavy drainage problems in that area.

Rebirth of Ozark Region

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 30- Problems and prospects of an economic rebirth in the Ozark Region of Missouri, Arkansas, and Oklahoma are discussed by two economists in an article in the current (July-August) issue of Business and Government Review, bi-monthly publication of the University of Missouri's Business and Public Administration Research Center.

One hundred twenty-five designated as an "economic development" region under provisions of the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965. An Ozark Regional Planning Commission has been set up to coordinate federal-state programs.

The state universities in Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma are coordinating their research and extension efforts in the region through a new organization called Ozarks Unlimited, Inc., of which Dr. C. B. Ratchford, University of Missouri vice-president for extension, is chairman, and Dr. Raymond E. Peck, University vice- president for research, is a director. The University of Arkansas, Oklahoma State University, and the University of Oklahoma are also represented among the officers.

Co-authors of the Review article, titled "Spotlight on the Ozarks," are Dr. Lloyd D. Bender, a member of the Economic Development Division of Economic Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, and Dr. V. James Rhodes, professor and chairman of the Department of Agricultural Economics at the University here. Dr. Bender in his federal position is concerned with the planning of research projects for the Ozark area and works closely with the University staff in Columbia. He received his doctorate from the University; Dr. Rhodes holds a doctorate from Harvard Uni-

The current issue of the Review includes also articles on "Commercial Bank Markets: A Case Study," by Dr. Harry L. Johnson, associate professor in the Graduate School of Business, University of Texas; "Program Budgeting --Applying Economic Analysis to Government Expenditure Decisions," by Dr. Murray L. Weidenbaum, associate professor of economics at Washington University, St. Louis; and "Japanese Ideologies and Cross-cultural Understanding," a summary of an address by Mrs. Kiyoko T. Cho, professor of history in International Christian University, Tokyo, Japan, presented at the Mid-America Assembly held at the University here in April 1966. The Review also has a report on the Mid-America Assembly, titled "U.S.-Japanese Relations Considered."

Drs. Bender and Rhodes in their discussion of the Ozarks point out that designation of the 125 counties as an economic development region will "bring not only national attention to the region, but also an opportunity for its people to plan and guide future economic and social progress." The region's economy, they write, lacks the affluence of the other growing parts of the United States, yet it has potential for growth, and "various federal programs, combined with local initiative and private capital, will be the tools used in trying to build a healthier economy."

They report that the swift economic development of the past century has largely bypassed the region, with a declining but persistent agriculture still the largest single source of employment, while the area suffers from chronic under-employment, lack of economic opportunity, and low incomes for many of its people. Out-migration from the region is heavy, as high as 60 per cent in the younger age brackets in 1950-60.

"Policies for development have focused on two extremes," the economists write. "One might be called education-migration--critics call it the evacuation policy. The other is an area development policy, which critics say is preservation of the status quo and is oriented to physical resources rather than people.

"Proponents of each approach agree the resources of the region are insufficiently developed to support adequately its resident population. Shall the balance be restored by reducing the population or by developing the resources? Past expansion of economic activity in the Ozarks has not begun to keep pace with the ever-flowing well of youth born, reared, and educated in these mountains. Manufacturing activity for instance has increased at a very rapid rate in the Ozarks. Yet, in the last decade, the number of people leaving agricultural employment was 3 1/2 times greater than the increase in manufacturing employment.

"Both the advocates of out-migration and of area development agree on the importance of improved education and skill training for youngsters and adults. Skills must be obtained if the people are to take more productive jobs in, or outside the region. In 1960, one out of 10 Ozark adults was a functional illiterate with less than five years of formal schooling. Only 31 per cent had completed high school compared to 41 per cent for the nation. If the Ozarks are to 'catch up' a higher than average level of education must be attained by school children. Moreover, any tangible results in the near future require a much greater program of adult education.

"Those favoring the area development approach fear the social and economic effects of large out-migration. They point to the downward spiral of economic activity resulting from the eroding effect of migration. With large out-migration rates for youth, population remaining is disproportionately very old and very young-- the non-producing members of society. The result is a burden of social services which cannot be met by the tax base. Literally millions of dollars of private and social investment are represented by young migrants. No region can suffer such a drain of human capital indefinitely and continue to progress."

The writers point out further that outside public and private assistance is desirable if the people and resources of underdeveloped regions are to meet the challenges of the 20th century. However, they continue, local initiative, foresight and careful planning are required effectively to use the outside assistance in shaping the destiny of the Ozark region. The authors discuss relevant legislation for aid and ways for implementation.

The Ozark Regional Planning Commission, the article reports, is set up to "review and study, advise and assist, and formulate and recommend policies and plans."

"The Commission, therefore, will have important responsibilities for coordinating all existing federal and state programs--through its authorization to make recommendations on the 'expenditure of funds by federal, state and local departments and agencies in its region in the field of natural resources, agriculture, education, training, health and welfare, and transportation.' In addition to its potential as a coordinator, the Commission can request funds directly from the Congress to support development plans."

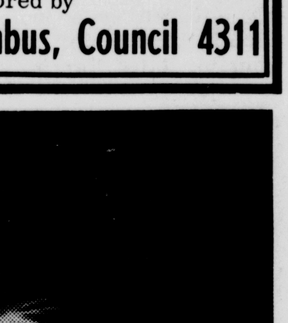

The authors comment that although manufacturing employment is growing at a much more rapid rate in the Ozarks than in the entire United States, it has been confined for the most part to only a few small urban centers. Considerable priority, they say, presumably will have to be given to the development of manufacturing and associated services, and "to the extent that industries are local, labor oriented, or business-services oriented, the growing towns and cities are likely to be the best sites. . . Recreation, timber, mining, agriculture and agri-business are also promising industries. These enterprises tend to demand resource- oriented investments. Where the large and growing cities are not located near reservoirs, ore sites, or timber reserves, then sizable investments may be needed in rural centers."

They point out also that it "is apparent that more highways through the Ozarks would have benefits," especially north-south highways to provide more convenient access among the large cities, while there are "also obvious needs" for better access roads within the region.

"The general lines for development seem clear. Agricultural employment will eventually stabilize at a considerably lower figure. Industrial employment will continue to grow. Investment and employment in recreation will grow. Utilization of timber and minerals will expand but with relatively minor impact upon total employment. If various mineral processing industries can be added to extraction, then an increase in employment would occur."

The article also takes up the part of the state universities in the three states are taking through new research underway. Some projects, they report, "aim at better understanding of the area's human and physical resources. Some are projecting economic activity within the present environment. Some are continuing to examine the potential for growth in the substantial recreation industry clustered around the principal lakes."

In their conclusion the authors say that "most of the planning can only be done by Ozark residents . . . as they act together to achieve common goals. Before there are federal investments, matching funds must be provided by the states or localities. Before there can be zoning, local people must desire it. If the Ozarks have economic rebirth, it is private capital and private entrepreneurship which will play the larger role. Public investments and planning can be catalytic at best."

Whitfield Becomes A Twin Killer

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The 28-year-old Cleveland first baseman has rifled 20 hits in 44 tries in 11 games against Minnesota this season. His 1966 batting mark against New York, the team he has tormented since coming into the American League four years ago, is only .235.

Whitfield gunned three hits, including a two-run homer, and right-hander Steve Hargan fired blanks as the Indians scalped the Twins 4-0 Thursday.

In the only other AL games, league-leading Baltimore downed Kansas City 11-3 and Boston edged the Yanks 3-2.

In the National League, San Francisco beat Atlanta 3-1, Pittsburgh routed Houston 9-0 and Philadelphia defeated the New York Mets 1-0.

Whitfield, whose season's batting average is only .250, walloped his 12th homer after Chico Salmon singled in the eighth to clinch the Indians' victory. Earlier, Whitfield had singled home Jim Landis in the first inning, then singled and scored Cleveland's second run in the fourth.

Hargan, making only his third start of the year, allowed only one Minnesota runner to reach second. He struck out 10 and walked none. Jim Perry was the losing pitcher.

The Orioles collected 19 hits, including eight doubles, in crushing the A's and boosting their AL lead to four games over idle Detroit.

Baltimore roughed up Ralph Terry, Kansas City's starter, for three runs on five hits, including doubles by Frank Robinson and Luis Aparicio, in the opening inning and never were headed.

Carl Yastrzemski and Don Demeter were the latest Yankee killers. Yastrzemski doubled and scored on Demeter's single in the seventh inning, breaking a 2-2 tie for the Red Sox.

The Yanks had taken a 1-0 lead in the second and picked up another run in the fourth on Joe Pepitone's 14th home run. Boston tied it in the fifth and shelled Jim Bouton on an error, Rico Petrocelli's single, a fielder's choice, Yastrzemski's double and an infield hit by George Scott.

The victory went to Don McMahon, who checked the Yankees in the final three innings after Jim Lonborg was lifted for a pinch hitter in the sixth. Hal Reniff took the loss.

Yankee slugger Mickey Mantle, who had hammered two homers in each of the two previous games, walked three times and flied out in his other two trips.

Tragedy Strikes Two Race Car Drivers

Wm. Saner, secretary of the Cape Girardeau Stock Car Association, has been advised that Durrell Fowler, Portageville, had been injured while driving at the Portageville race track, having received 50 per cent burns to the body, slight brain concussion and a fractured leg. Mr. Fowler, driver of car No. 15 in A Class, is the top standing leader at Cape Raceways.

Another driver, Harl Dean Prior, Benton Ill., died Monday at a Blytheville, Ark., hospital following injuries sustained at the Blytheville race track on June 19. Mr. Prior had also participated in races at Cape Raceway, driving car No. 11. He was 25 years old, and is survived by his wife, Shirley.

Joe Medwick to Tour Cardinal Minor Leagues

Joe Medwick, who worked as a hitting instructor in the Cardinals' Minor League Spring Training Camp, is going to get a chance to see how his students are making out.

Medwick, according to an announcement by Cardinal General Manager Bob Howsam, is going to tour the Red Birds' Minor League Clubs to observe and instruct some of the St. Louis Club's prospects.

Medwick will start work this week-end, according to Sheldon (Chief) Bender, Director of Cardinal Minor League Clubs. He will visit Tulla, Little Rock, Cedar Rapids, Rock Hill, St. Petersburg and Sarasota. In all, he will spend two months with the Cardinal teams.

The 55-year-old Medwick, a top candidate for baseball's Hall of Fame, had a .324 batting average for 17 big league seasons, most of them with the Cardinals. In 1937, he was National League batting champion with .374, the runs batted in leader with 154 and the Most Valuable Player. He hit over .300 in 14 of his 17 seasons.

All Stars To Compete In All-Star Game

ST. LOUIS AP -- The St. louis Globe - Democrat announced Thursday that starting Dec. 3 it plans to sponsor an annual Missouri high school All-Star football game for charity in the Busch Memorial Stadium.

The paper said that in November members of its sports staff and other football experts would select 33 players for each team, the North Missouri and the South Missouri All-Stars.

North players will come from areas above Highway 40 from the Mississippi River west to the Missouri River and then the Missouri River westward. South players will be chosen from cities below the dividing line.

The first game will benefit the Salvation Army.

The Globe-Democrat said it had received permission to hold the game from the Missouri State High School Activities Association. The paper said they will adhere to all regulations on eligibility.

Cards Sign Two

Don Cooksey, one of the top young ballplayers in the St. Louis area, has been signed to a minor league contract by the Cardinals, it was announced today by Director of Scouting George Silvey.

Cooksey, who pitched and played the outfield for O'Fallon Tech, is being assigned to Sarasota, Florida, of the Gulf Coast League.

Cooksey, an 18-year-old 200-pounder, was scouted by Joe Monahan and George Hasser. The 6-foot, 3-inch athlete is rated as having a "great arm, excellent power and size." He is considered as having a chance to make good at either position.

Monoahan, in his report said that Cooksey "has the arm to make him an outstanding pitcher, and the swing and power to become an outstanding hitter."

The Cardinals also signed Samuel Charles Stewart, an outstanding atilete at Oklahoma Baptist University, to a contract with their Sarasota club of the Gulf Coast League, it was announced by Director of Scouting George Silvey.

Charley Stewart lettered in baseball, basketball and track at Oklahoma Baptist, had a three-year college batting average of .397, and stole 80 bases in 70 games.

In track, he ran the 100-yard dash in 9.6 seconds, and had a mark of 23 feet, 9 inches in the broad jump. He was a member of the OBU team which won the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Championship this past season.

Scout Fred Hawn, who signed him, reports that he has timed Stewart going to first base in as fast as 3.4 seconds on a bunt, and 3.8 and 3.9 seconds after a full swing.

Suggested Melody

The national anthem of the United States. "The Star-Spangled Banner," was first printed as a poem. Judge J. H. Nicholson, brother-in-law of Francis Scott Key, suggested that the poem should be sung to the tune of an old English drinking song, "To Anacreon in Heaven."

George Dean Named Head Football Coach At Malden High School

Four Things Recommended City

Sikeston's Traffic Committee recently made four recommendations to the City Council and City Manager Raymert Miller.

"We do not believe that installation of STOP signs stopping north bound and south bound traffic on Davis Street at Wakefield, is in the public interest. This would be stopping the non-turning traffic to permit turning traffic from Wakefield to take precedence. This is against normal conventional traffic practice. If the apartment house now being completed at this typical T connection contained 20 or more times the number of apartments it does contain, our recommendation may be different.

"Installation of 3-way STOP signs at Kingshighway and Center Street, stopping all except northbound traffic on Kingshighway. This committee, since its beginning in 1955, has been acutely aware of this particular street intersection. We have consistently believed that (1) this intersection is not an accident breeder; (2) traffic at this intersection is not too heavy to be self-regulatory; and (3) Unnecessary regulatory signs waste peoples' time and money and engender a contempt for such signs; (4) Since no visibility problems exist at this corner except for northbound traffic, and then only when turning right and since east-west traffic on Center Street is now yielding to Kingshighway traffic, we are not aware of any problem which could be alleviated by more signs. We therefore recommend no action.

"Your committee discussed a suggestion that traffic speed of 40 mph on Murray Lane between Kingshighway and the Frisco railroad be permitted instead of 30 mph as presently permitted. Your committee recommends no change.

This committee discussed informally the present 4-way STOP signs on New Madrid at Center and North Streets, and the merits of these present (temporary) 4-way STOP signs as against the automatic STOP-GO signal lights now removed for repairs; we are in agreement that if the present temporary signs were slightly lower and were reflectorized for better night-time vision, they may be better, and certainly would be for cheaper, regulatory signs than the automatic lights."

Missouri Basin Bill Approved by Congress

WASHINGTON AP -- Congressional action was completed Thursday on a bill authorizing the appropriation of $60 million for work on units of the Missouri River Basin program.

The Senate cleared the House-passed bill and sent it to the White House.

The bill would raise the authorization for spending on the series of dams along the Missouri to above $1 billion. It calls for appropriations of $60 million for use in the two fiscal years beginning July 1 on projects already under construction.

Reclamation Bureau engineers prpose to spend $27,270,000 in the two years on the Glen Elder project in Kansas.

The legislation calls for $12,694,000 for power transmission facilities throughout the basin, $6,559,000 for Yellowtail Dam in Montana, $2,652,000 for the Almena project in Kansas and smaller sums for other projects.

THIS WEEK SALUTING FIRST GENERAL BAPTIST CHURCH

GENERAL BAPTIST CHURCH COVENANT

Having given ourselves to God, we now give ourselves to His church, and covenant with it and with each other as also with God- - - -

1. That we will forsake all unrighteousness -- even the appearance of evil. We will abstain from all questionable pursuits and pleasures -- we will forego all hurtful habits -- we will avoid all evil associations; and we will "touch not, taste not, handle not" any unclean thing.

2. That we will follow earnestly after righteousness and true holiness, in the fear and love of God. We shall seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, trusting that all needful and helpful things will be added to us. We will seek entire consecration to God -- we will live a life of prayer -- we will seek the constant abiding of the divine life within us -- we will be satisfied only when we have the evidence that we please God and are accepted of Him.

3. That we will faithfully improve all the means of grace. We will attend and support the services of the church, the preaching, the social services, the business meetings. We will contribute freely of our means for the advancement of the gospel -- we will co-operate with our brethren in every enterprise having for its end the glory of God and the salvation of men.

4. That we will be Christ-like in all our deportment. We will be tender and affectionate toward each other -- we will be careful of each other's reputation -- thinking no evil and backbiting not with our tongues -- we will return good for evil -- we will be just and honest, truthful and honorable in all our dealings -- we will do unto others as we would be done by -- we will be meek, loving and forgiving, as we desire and hope to be forgiven.

5. That we will be faithful Christian workers. We will do whatever Christian work comes to hand, shunning no cross, shirking no duty. We will even seek opportunities to do good, glorify God and save souls. We will study to win our associates, our neighbors, our families, all whom we may influence to become Christians. We will count it more than our meat and our drink, more than all things else to do the will of our Father in heaven, to lead souls from sin and death and lead them to God and heaven.

Medicare Answers You Need to Know

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are answers to some of the questions most frequently asked about medicare, starting today for all Americans 65 and older:

Q. If the hospital I choose is overcrowded, does medicare guarantee me a bed?

Q. If I have to go back into the hospital two or more times, do I pay the $40 "deductible" each time?

A. No. You pay just the first $40 of hospital charges in each "spell of illness."

Q. What's a "spell of illness."

A. To medicare it's a period of time, not an ailment. It starts the day you enter a hospital. It ends 60 days after your discharge from the hospital. Or from a nursing home — after next Jan. 1, medicare will provide posthospital convalescent care in nursing homes for those needing it.

Q. Suppose I go back to the hospital for a different sickness?

A. To medicare it doesn't matter. It's all one "spell of illness" if the new admission comes within 60 days of the last discharge.

Q. Do I have to go back to the same hospital?

A. No. Your benefits follow you from hospital to hospital and from city to city. Just show your red, white and blue card. Any participating hospital can tell instantly, by check to a computer in Baltimore, Md., whether you have used up all your "benefit days."

Q. If I'm in a hospital when medicare starts, does medicare pick up the bill?

A. Not for past days. Medicare picks up as of July 1, and you'll still have to pay the $40 deductible as well as the charges for the days preceding medicare.

Q. I've signed up to pay $3 a month for the voluntary doctor bill insurance. It has a $50 deductible; how often do I have to pay that?

A. Just once each year, regardless of how much your doctor bills add up to in a year.

Q. Should I cancel my old health insurance policy?

A. If you are 65 but your wife is not, she's not covered by medicare. You may want to keep her policy in force.

Q. We are both over 65. Should we buy the "supplemental" plans offered to over-65 persons by Blue Cross, Blue Shield and other private insurers for additional protection?

A. That depends on your own needs and inclinations. Some policies are designed to cover medicare's "deductibles" and provide benefits beyond the limits of medicare. Another type of policy pays off in cash benefits for each day of hospitalization; the money could be used for the inevitable costs of an illness, or for "extras," such as a bedside telephone or a private room instead of the semiprivate accommodations paid for by medicare.

Q. Medicare's doctor bill insurance covers 80 per cent of a doctor's "reasonable charges," after the $50 deductible. Does the doctor send his bill to medicare or to me?

A. Either one. He can send it to medicare's local "intermediary" agency — in most cities, the local Blue Shield organization — which will pay him 80 per cent of what it deems a "reasonable charge" for his treatment or operation; the other 20 per cent would come for you. Or he could send the whole bill directly to you.

Q. In the latter case what do I do?

A. Pay it, then apply for reimbursement to the "intermediary."

Federal Grants Paid out for Widening Variety of Uses

By MARTHA COLE

WASHINGTON (AP)—A sabbatical leave for a college art teacher, research on a strawberry disease, a study of cancer drugs, a job for a school dropout, a new park in Honolulu.

For these, and scores of others each day, there are federal grants in aid.

Announcements from the federal departments and agencies show the interest in the cultural life, a beautiful America, space, the poor, the elderly, the handicapped, the jobless, education. The list goes on.

The government spends billions in grants each year. They go to states, counties, communities, colleges and research institutions. Generally, they are matched by local funds, sometimes 50-50. Sometimes the government pays two-thirds or three-fourths.

A check of one day—last Wednesday — on announcements from government agencies about grants turned up this sampling: The Department of Housing and Urban Development announced grants of almost $134 million to help urban mass transportation projects. Example: Cleveland got almost $7 million for an extension to its airport.

The department granted $554,091 to Honolulu for parks in the city's urban renewal projects.

The National Endowment for the Arts approved up to 50 sabbatical leave grants of $7,500 each for teaching artists in colleges and universities.

The Department of Agriculture made a $115,000 grant to Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research, Inc., Yonkers, N.Y., for a four-year study of resistance of strawberries to red stele disease.

The Public Health Service announced it has committed more than $2 million for the next five years for research at Yale University School of Medicine on how cancer drugs work.

The Commerce Department had grants to help build vocational schools, sewage plants, a town library and a community hospital.

And up at the Capitol, the Senate Agriculture Committee voted to expand the grants for the school lunch program, while the House Rules Committee cleared for floor action the grants of the antipoverty program.

Ky Says Bombing May End War by Jan. 1

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP -- Premier Nguyen Cao Ky said today the U. S. bombing of North Vietnamese fuel installations may bring the war to an end by Jan. 1.

"I am pleased about this action, I have been advocating it for a long time," Ky told newsmen at the Bien Hoa airbase 15 miles from here where he presided over South Viet Nam's Air Force Day ceremonies. "I am not recommending the bombing of populated areas, but all strategic areas must be attacked."

Sad Day for Mississippi

By JOHN HALL

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi, the first state to ratify national prohibition in 1918, today ended the last statewide ban on liquor in the United States with an ironic touch.

One bootlegger—a man of unknown years who goes by the name Red Hydrick—is flatly disgusted with the change. Hydrick is probably the best-known bootlegger in central Mississippi.

Although liquor became legal at 12:01 a.m., it won't really be legal until a county votes itself wet—which will take at least 16 days.

Gov. Paul B. Johnson has vowed strict compliance with statewide enforcement of prohibition until such referendums are held. It was Johnson who called for legalization earlier this year, terming prohibition a farce.

Red Hydrick sat in his bootlegger shack on the banks of the muddy Pearl River in Rankin County across from Jackson late Thursday night, surveyed the bare, unpainted wooden shelves, two empty bourbon bottles, and rasped:

"I've been in this building 27 years and I've gone through hell. There has been a lot of money taken in the front door of this shack, but through the hazards of this racket, there has been a lot go out through the back door."

Hydrick, like all the other illegal sellers of bonded booze, was closing up.

He's made no plans for the future. Most bootleggers are going along with the 16-day dry spell because the new Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has vowed that anyone caught selling during the interim won't get a legal license.

Beer has been legal in the state for years—on a local option basis. And beer is all that will be allowed until counties vote themselves wet.

Thus, for a time, Mississippi's $36-million annual illegal liquor business has been halted. Under the old system, the state collected nearly $1 million annually in a black-market tax on booze.

Modern Cowboys Start Herd Moving Toward Kansas

ALTUS, Okla. (AP) — Fresh from a victorious Indian "battle" and a night of dancing, barbecuing and roping, a group of Texas cowpokes and their 93 Longhorn cattle moved out today toward Dodge City, Kan.

The group left San Antonio, Tex., last Sunday and is due in Dodge City Saturday. The drive is to mark the 100th anniversary of the trail drives after the Civil War.

Texas Lt. Gov. Preston Smith rode ahead of the group as it crossed into Oklahoma over the Red River and was met by Oklahoma Lt. Gov. Leo Winters.

Six Indians in warpaint also met the party but the cowboys drove them off, just like in the movies.

After getting into Oklahoma, the cattle were trucked to Altus, paraded down main street and to a rodeo enclosure. The cowboys took part in the barbecue, square dancing and roping contests.

Mother Drowns 3 Children For 2nd Time in 12 Years

FAIRFIELD, Maine (AP) — Three young children were found drowned in their rural home Thursday, in what was almost a duplication of a tragedy 12 years ago when their mother was committed in the drowning of her first three children.

Police said they would seek a murder warrant today against the mother, Constance Fisher, 37.

The bodies were found by the father, Carl Fisher, 45, when he came home from work. In March 1954, he had come home from work, from the same job, to find the first three children dead.

Both times he found his wife unconscious. The first time the children were 6 years, 4 years, and 11 months old. This time, the children were 6 years, 4 years and 9 months old.

Mrs. Fisher was taken to Thayer Hospital in Waterville Thursday night, where she regained consciousness. A hospital spokesman said she appear to be in good condition. She was under police guard.

Police Chief Frederick Gould said three pill boxes were found empty Thursday. He said Mrs. Fisher had taken an overdose of medication. He also said a note was found, but did not disclose its contents.

Twelve years ago, Mrs. Fisher attempted suicide, officials said, by drinking hair shampoo. She left a note then, saying she had killed the children because "God told me to do it," and saying, "They are in heaven, safe from evil."

She was charged with murder then and committed to the State Hospital in Augusta. A grand jury refused to indict her after the hospital reported she was insane.

A hospital spokesman said today that Mrs. Fisher was released March 6, 1959, and that there apparently was no indication of any potential recurrence of her illness.

The father told police he returned home from his job in the car shops of the Maine Central Railroad in Waterville about 5 p.m. Thursday.

He found his 9-month-old daughter, Nathalie Rose lying face down in about 1½ inches of water in the bathtub.

Fisher ran about a quarter of a mile to the nearest home with a telephone, the home of Howard Wood, to summon help.

He and police then found Kathleen Louise, 6, and Michael Jon, lying under blankets in a bed. He found his wife on a bed.

An autopsy by Dr. Irving Goodof, Waterville pathologist, showed the three had drowned. Dr. Maurice Philbrick, county medical examiner, placed the time of death at about 7 a.m. Thursday.

The father was reported in seclusion with friends.

BONNER, Mont. AP -- A woman dropped her sandal in the Blackfoot River Thursday and three youngsters drowned trying to retrieve it.

The children were Rose Ann Elledge, 15, Deer Lodge, Mont.; Terry Pesanti, 12, Twin Creeks, Mont. and Michael Fitzpatrick, 8, of Andover, Mass. All four bodies were recovered.

Missoula County undersheriff Russell Pulliam said Mrs. John Fitzpatrick lost her sandal in the river. Terry Pesanti leaped into the river first, followed by the other youngsters.

Head Start Brings $3.4 Million Into State

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Missouri communities have received $3,473,181 to operate "Head Start" programs for preschool children this summer.

Philip V. Maher, administrative assistant for urban affairs, said today 18,000 children from low income families will be benefitted. The program includes preparation for school, medical and dental examinations, one hot meal a day and parental participation.

The eight-week program will operate in 128 centers. Funds this year are $1,309,466 more than Missouri got last year under this phase of the Economic Opportunity program.

Mental Health Unit Sponsors Workshops

KENNETT -- The Southeast Missouri Mental Health Association will serve as sponsor of sheltered workshop programs for the mentally retarded in Dunklin, Pemiscot and New Madrid Counties, it was announced Thursday by Troy Wilson of Kennett, association president.

Wilson said the decision to serve as sponsor for the sheltered workshop programs was made at the association's board of directors meeting, held this week at Hayti.

The workshop program envisioned by the association, Wilson said, is the extended employment workshop program which provides permanent employment for lower range educable and upper range trainable mentally retarded, as well as other handicapped persons.

Persons eligible for the workshop program must be 18 years or older, must have had some type of school training and have a productive work capacity in sheltered environment adapted to the abilities of the retarded, but whose limited capabilities make them non-employable in competitive business and industry and unsuited for vocational rehabilitation training.

Missouri's 1965 laws establishing the workshop program are designed to provide state aid in the organization and operation of extended employment workshops established by local non-profit community groups to provide employment opportunities for 30 per cent of the mentally retarded.

Wilson said the SEMO Mental Health Association is also making plans to establish another mental health clinic in the Bootheel, with the second unit to be located at the Pemiscot County Mental Health Center at Hayti. He said the opening of the second clinic would depend upon the availability of a psychiatrist from the Farmington State Hospital.

The association is currently seeking funds in the Bootheel to underwrite the cost of the clinic and to carry out educational and advisory programs in the Bootheel.

Individual Freedom And The Common Defence

The answer returned by the Supreme Court, in its various free speech decisions, turns upon the reality and urgency of the perils, whether of persuasion or of conspiracy, actually presented by the heretical or seditious belief. A free society may, indeed must, defend itself from genuine dangers arising from seditious teachings and disloyal beliefs. Whether the danger is that the enough minds to make possible a violent overthrow of our institutions by mob action, or whether it is that the disloyal faith will engender a dangerous infiltration of these institutions to distort their purposes and penetrate their secrets in the interests of a foreign power, makes no difference. There is quite obviously not the slightest present danger of violent overthrow as a result of the educational efforts of the Communist party or its schools and missionaries, yet the Court found that the party's conspiratorial activities were at least so dangerous that Congress could not, despite the First Amendment, be denied power to legislate against them by prohibiting (in the Smith Act) the teaching and advocacy of the Communist belief.

The true theoretical argument revolves, then around the reality of the peril--not the peril presented by specific Communist spies, saboteurs, or infiltrators, but the peril presented by the holding and teaching of the belief which presumably incites such persons to their acts. There is no question that this danger has been enormously exaggerated in the public mind by many forces, operating from many motives. The natural fears of the society as a whole engendered by a difficult and awesome international situation are by no means a complete explanation; these fears have received powerful reinforcement and exploitation from the pressures of personal ambition and partisan fury, from the tendency of the security officers and secret police to magnify their accomplishments and justify their function in society, from the reactions of those who see in Communism less a threat to the free society as a whole than to their own positions of power or profit, from the natural, if irrational, hatred which most men feel toward any heretical or non-conformist challange. The dangers have been grossly exaggerated. Yet there is also little doubt that they are in some measure real. They are doubtless real enough to authorize some departure from the spirit of the First Amendment and the Jeffersonian principle that the civil authority may not "intrude his powers into the field of opinion." They are hardly real enough to authorize all the departures of the past few years. This has recently been increasingly recognized in court decisions and popular reactions. Yet the problem of just where and how to draw the dividing line remains; it is probably the most basic of all the issues which divide the devoted "anti-Communists" from the devoted "libertarians."

State Mental Units to Add Job Training

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — New vocational rehabilitation units will open today at the St. Joseph and Farmington state hospitals, to help train recovered mental patients and find jobs for them.

It is a joint effort by the Division of Mental Diseases and the vocational rehabilitation section of the Department of Education.

They were planned because of the success of a similar unit at the Nevada State Hospital. Joy O. Talley, head of vocational rehabilitation, said the Nevada unit placed 109 former mental patients in jobs during the past fiscal year.

The tentative budget for the St. Joseph facility will be $323,248 and for Farmington $336,680. Federal funds will amount to 75 per cent of the cost. Each unit will be staffed with counselors, social workers, psychologists and registered nurses.

At St. Joseph the unit will occupy part of a wing in the administration building and at Farmington part of one of the dormitory halls. Each will house up to 60 patients.

Cecil Brown, director of the Nevada unit, will come to Jefferson City to supervise the overall administration of the rehabilitation facilities at the three hospitals. He will be succeeded at Nevada by James L. Gonterman, who has been a psychiatric social worker there.

Meriell Sindt of Jefferson City will supervise the St. Joseph unit and Danny R. Alcorn of Cape Girardeau will direct the Farmington center. Both have been vocational rehabilitation counselors.

The units will simulate normal living conditions as much as possible and patients will be given an opportunity to work at jobs on the hospital grounds and in the commuuity to help them develop good attitudes and habits.

The sun beat down on the staging area. The men sat in cloistered groups around the field. It was very hot, and there was no shade to offer any respite so the most they could do for relief was to lay their helmets to one side, and unbutton their shirts, in order to take advantage of any possible breeze.

I sat inside the door of a helicopter, and because of the protection from the sun this gave me, I felt slightly self-conscious for having a better place to wait, than did these men. We were eating breakfast, and for the men, this was the first of many C ration meals they would have during the coming operation, it would however, by my only C ration meal of the day. The box I held was marked "MEAL, INDIVIDUAL, B-2 unit, HAM AND LIMA BEANS." It also contained fruit cake, (which I exchanged for pears). There was an accessory kit containing one book of waterproof matches, four pieces of Chicklets chewing gum, two packages of instant coffee, one package of sugar, one of salt, a pack of cigarettes (4 in the pack), marked "NOT TO BE SOLD", and one tightly rolled packet of toilet tissue. I opened the meal with my P-38 can opener, which is a small finger operated can opener that I keep attached to my dog tag chain.

Someone came around handing out mail to several of the men, and I watched one as he read his letter. He was about twenty - five yards away from me, and he didn't know I was observing him as he read. He held the letter securely in front of him and read with such an intensity, that it looked as if he were trying to dissolve into the written pages. His eyes were glued to the pages, and his lips moved slightly. He was totally oblivious to the inevitable horseplay going on around him. I found myself wondering a little about him. He seemed so young! This time last year, I mused, he was probably pestering his father for the use of the car, to go to Graduation Prom, or some such event. He looked as if he should be worrying about whether his school would have a winning season in football, rather than preparing for a combat assault.

The GRF had begun now, and once over the LZ, there was the normal radio chatter pinpointing gun positions, calling for one element to close, calling for gun - ship support, etc. The gun - ships darted around like snake doctors beside water. They were firing rockets, 20 and 40mm rounds, and spraying machine gun fire into Charlie's positions. We spotted a VC firing from a cement bunker, and our right door gunner hit him with about a five second burst. Scratch one VC!

Finally, the helicopters discharged all their loads, (our helicopter doesn't carry troops, only equipment for making on the spot repair of aircraft, or to rig them for sling removal), and we left the area to return to home base.

I have moved from my original field position, and now live in a building right outside the gate of Tan Son Nhut Air Base. My building is next door to the hospital, and on nights that it doesn't rain, they show movies on the hospital lawn. I was waiting for the movie to start, when an ambulance arrived. They began off - loading the wounded from that morning's operation.

I stepped to one side to allow them to pass with one of the men. His shirt was off, and his pants had been loosened. There was a blood soaked bandage around his stomach. He was barefoot, and his boots hung from one end of the stretcher. A third medic walked alongside, holding up a bottle of a clear liquid, which was slowly draining into the wounded soldier.

When I looked at his face, I noted that his expression was one of confused curiosity, rather than fear of pain. He was about the same age as the young man I had seen reading the letter earlier that morning. It would have come as no surprise to me, if he had indeed been the same man. (I will never call them boys, they have all been deprived of their boyhood, and whether they are ready or not, or whether they want it or not, they have been thrust, some bleeding, some screaming with pain, some even dying into manhood.)

These men did not rush forward with exuberent patriotism, the war here is not a game for them. It is not something gloriously exciting, but is something that they know must be done, and they take no pleasure in hot, lonely, most always tedious, and frequently very frightening job.

Draft Study Urges Taking Young First

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON (AP)—A long-awaited Defense Department study concluded today that the draft should be redesigned to induct the youngest eligible men first and not men nearest 26—"those who are the most settled in their careers."

The change would shift the emphasis to the 19-20 age bracket.

"Combat commanders prefer the younger age group" the study said, "and about eight of 10 volunteers are in the age group under 20."

The study, presented to the House Armed Services Committee by Asst. Secretary of Defense Thomas D. Morris, made these other principal points:

—The United States can not look forward to discontinuing the draft in the next decade unless changing world conditions reduce needs substantially below the force levels required since Korea.

—An all-volunteer force cannot be justified because it would cost anywhere between $4 billion and $17 billion to increase military pay enough to attract the volunteers needed even for a pre-Viet Nam force of 2.7 million. More than 3 million are in service now.

Morris, in charge of manpower for the Defense Department, testified as the committee wound up its hearings into the operations of the Selective Service System.

Cotton Research Bill Passes Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The House completed congressional action on a bill to set up a grower - financed program of research and promotion for cotton. The bill now goes to President Johnson.

The program would be financed by a checkoff system in which growers would be assessed $1 a bale at the time they sell their cotton. Growers not desiring to participate could get their money returned after several months.

Rebirth of Ozark Region

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 30- Problems and prospects of an economic rebirth in the Ozark Region of Missouri, Arkansas, and Oklahoma are discussed by two economists in an article in the current (July-August) issue of Business and Government Review, bi-monthly publication of the University of Missouri's Business and Public Administration Research Center.

One hundred twenty-five designated as an "economic development" region under provisions of the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965. An Ozark Regional Planning Commission has been set up to coordinate federal-state programs.

The state universities in Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma are coordinating their research and extension efforts in the region through a new organization called Ozarks Unlimited, Inc., of which Dr. C. B. Ratchford, University of Missouri vice-president for extension, is chairman, and Dr. Raymond E. Peck, University vice- president for research, is a director. The University of Arkansas, Oklahoma State University, and the University of Oklahoma are also represented among the officers.

Co-authors of the Review article, titled "Spotlight on the Ozarks," are Dr. Lloyd D. Bender, a member of the Economic Development Division of Economic Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, and Dr. V. James Rhodes, professor and chairman of the Department of Agricultural Economics at the University here. Dr. Bender in his federal position is concerned with the planning of research projects for the Ozark area and works closely with the University staff in Columbia. He received his doctorate from the University; Dr. Rhodes holds a doctorate from Harvard Uni-

The current issue of the Review includes also articles on "Commercial Bank Markets: A Case Study," by Dr. Harry L. Johnson, associate professor in the Graduate School of Business, University of Texas; "Program Budgeting --Applying Economic Analysis to Government Expenditure Decisions," by Dr. Murray L. Weidenbaum, associate professor of economics at Washington University, St. Louis; and "Japanese Ideologies and Cross-cultural Understanding," a summary of an address by Mrs. Kiyoko T. Cho, professor of history in International Christian University, Tokyo, Japan, presented at the Mid-America Assembly held at the University here in April 1966. The Review also has a report on the Mid-America Assembly, titled "U.S.-Japanese Relations Considered."

Drs. Bender and Rhodes in their discussion of the Ozarks point out that designation of the 125 counties as an economic development region will "bring not only national attention to the region, but also an opportunity for its people to plan and guide future economic and social progress." The region's economy, they write, lacks the affluence of the other growing parts of the United States, yet it has potential for growth, and "various federal programs, combined with local initiative and private capital, will be the tools used in trying to build a healthier economy."

They report that the swift economic development of the past century has largely bypassed the region, with a declining but persistent agriculture still the largest single source of employment, while the area suffers from chronic under-employment, lack of economic opportunity, and low incomes for many of its people. Out-migration from the region is heavy, as high as 60 per cent in the younger age brackets in 1950-60.

"Policies for development have focused on two extremes," the economists write. "One might be called education-migration--critics call it the evacuation policy. The other is an area development policy, which critics say is preservation of the status quo and is oriented to physical resources rather than people.

"Proponents of each approach agree the resources of the region are insufficiently developed to support adequately its resident population. Shall the balance be restored by reducing the population or by developing the resources? Past expansion of economic activity in the Ozarks has not begun to keep pace with the ever-flowing well of youth born, reared, and educated in these mountains. Manufacturing activity for instance has increased at a very rapid rate in the Ozarks. Yet, in the last decade, the number of people leaving agricultural employment was 3 1/2 times greater than the increase in manufacturing employment.

"Both the advocates of out-migration and of area development agree on the importance of improved education and skill training for youngsters and adults. Skills must be obtained if the people are to take more productive jobs in, or outside the region. In 1960, one out of 10 Ozark adults was a functional illiterate with less than five years of formal schooling. Only 31 per cent had completed high school compared to 41 per cent for the nation. If the Ozarks are to 'catch up' a higher than average level of education must be attained by school children. Moreover, any tangible results in the near future require a much greater program of adult education.

"Those favoring the area development approach fear the social and economic effects of large out-migration. They point to the downward spiral of economic activity resulting from the eroding effect of migration. With large out-migration rates for youth, population remaining is disproportionately very old and very young-- the non-producing members of society. The result is a burden of social services which cannot be met by the tax base. Literally millions of dollars of private and social investment are represented by young migrants. No region can suffer such a drain of human capital indefinitely and continue to progress."

The writers point out further that outside public and private assistance is desirable if the people and resources of underdeveloped regions are to meet the challenges of the 20th century. However, they continue, local initiative, foresight and careful planning are required effectively to use the outside assistance in shaping the destiny of the Ozark region. The authors discuss relevant legislation for aid and ways for implementation.

The Ozark Regional Planning Commission, the article reports, is set up to "review and study, advise and assist, and formulate and recomment policies and plans."

"The Commission, therefore, will have important responsibilities for coordinating all existing federal and state programs--through its authorization to make recommendations on the 'expenditure of funds by federal, state and local departments and agencies in its region in the field of natural resources, agriculture, education, training, health and welfare, and transportation.' In addition to its potential as a coordinator, the Commission can request funds directly from the Congress to support development plans."

The authors comment that although manufacturing employment is growing at a much more rapid rate in the Ozarks than in the entire United States, it has been confined for the most part to only a few small urban centers. Considerable priority, they say, presumably will have to be given to the development of manufacturing and associated services, and "to the extent that industries are local, labor oriented, or business-services oriented, the growing towns and cities are likely to be the best sites. . . Recreation, timber, mining, agriculture and agri-business are also promising industries. These enterprises tend to demand resource- oriented investments. Where the large and growing cities are not located near reservoirs, ore sites, or timber reserves, then sizable investments may be needed in rural centers."

They point out also that it "is apparent that more highways through the Ozarks would have benefits," especially north-south highways to provide more convenient access among the large cities, while there are "also obvious needs" for better access roads within the region.

"The general lines for development seem clear. Agricultural employment will eventually stabilize at a considerably lower figure. . Industrial employment will continue to grow. Investment and employment in recreation will grow. Utilization of timber and minerals will expand but with relatively minor impact upon total employment. If various mineral processing industries can be added to extraction, then an increase in employment would occur."

The article also takes up the part of the state universities in the three states are taking through new research underway. Some projects, they report, "aim at better understanding of the area's human and physical resources. Some are projecting economic activity within the present environment. Some are continuing to examine the potential for growth in the substantial recreation industry clustered around the principal lakes."

In their conclusion the authors say that "most of the planning can only be done by Ozark residents . . . as they act together to achieve common goals. Before there are federal investments, matching funds must be provided by the states or localities. Before there can be zoning, local people must desire it. If the Ozarks have economic rebirth, it is private capital and private entrepreneurship which will play the larger role. Public investments and planning can be catalytic at best."

Dr. Ralph Parker

New School Formed at M.U.

COLUMBIA, Mo., July 1 - Chancellor John W. Schwada announced today that the Board of Curators of the University of Missouri has established a School of Library Science effective July 1 and named Dr. Ralph Halstead Parker, University librarian since 1946, as its dean.

The new school which raises to 14 the number of divisions on the campus here, will represent an expansion of a present undergraduate library science curriculum to a full course of study offering a master's degree.

Chancellor Schwada said that the new division will have two primary goals, to train librarians to staff the rapidly expanding public school libraries and to offer instruction on new developments in library operation to prospective heads of larger public and private libraries.

Dr. Parker said that library school graduates are in great demand in the public school system, where library operations are being expanded to elementary school levels. At the same time, many of the older librarians are unfamiliar with newer developments in their field such as use of computers in library operations.

Under Dr. Parker, the University Library has moved into the computer field in a program that has attracted international attention. Dr. Parker believes that the University here is doing more in computer operation of libraries than all the other schools in the nation combined.

For the present the new school will be housed in the Library Building, where Dean Parker will have his office and where he will continue serving as university librarian until a successor is named.

His faculty at the moment consists of Francis J. Flood, assistant professor of library science, who has been chairman of the library science department which has been a part of the College of Arts and Science. Dean Parker said he expects to enlarge the faculty to five members as quickly as possible and to expand further as enrollment grows.

Dean Parker said that a start on the graduate program will be made during the fall semester opening in September, but that for the first year not enough courses will be offered in the master's program to produce a graduate by next June. The undergraduate program, which at present consists of 13 courses covering little more than two semesters of study plus eight related courses, will be continued, however, and some studies leading toward a master's degree will be inaugurated.

Dean Parker, native of Bertram, Tex., where he was born April 21, 1909, has Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts, and Doctor of Philosophy degrees he earned at the University of Texas between 1929 and 1935, and he spent a year as research fellow at the University of Chicago. He was with the University of Texas Library for six years, was librarian and associate professor of history at Pomona (Calif.) College for three, and directed University of Georgia libraries for six years, interrupted by a three-year assignment to the machine records branch of the adjutant general's office in the Army during World War II.

He is author of several publications on libraries and other topics and has written books on "Imperialism and the Liberation of Cuba" and "Punched Cards in Libraries."

As University librarian he supervised construction of the final wing to the half-century old Library Building and inaugurated the "open stack" method that permits free selection of books by students. With computers, records are kept on books checked out and rapid information is available on those overdue as well as a check on the flow and demand of the volumes.

With inauguration of the new school, the University here will have separate divisions headed by deans in fields of agriculture, arts and science, business and public administration, education, engineering, extension and community services, and veterinary medicine.

During hibernation, commonly known as winter sleep, some animals endure prolonged periods of cold. The body temperature does not conform to that of the air and may go down to a few degrees above freezing, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Four Things Recommended City

Sikeston's Traffic Committee recently made four recommendations to the City Council and City Manager Raymert Miller.

"We do not believe that installation of STOP signs stopping north bound and south bound traffic on Davis Street at Wakefield, is in the public interest. This would be stopping the non-turning traffic to permit turning traffic from Wakefield to take precedence. This is against normal conventional traffic practice. If the apartment house now being completed at this typical T connection contained 20 or more times the number of apartments it does contain, our recommendation may be different.

"Installation of 3-way STOP signs at Kingshighway and Center Street, stopping all except northbound traffic on Kingshighway. This committee, since its beginning in 1955, has been acutely aware of this particular street intersection. We have consistently believed that (1) this intersection is not an accident breeder; (2) traffic at this intersection is not too heavy to be self-regulatory; and (3) Unnecessary regulatory signs waste peoples' time and money and engender a contempt for such signs; (4) Since no visibility problems exist at this corner except for northbound traffic, and then only when turning right and since east-west traffic on Center Street is now yielding to Kingshighway traffic, we are not aware of any problem which could be alleviated by more signs. We therefore recommend no action.

"Your committee discussed a suggestion that traffic speed of 40 mph on Murray Lane between Kingshighway and the Frisco railroad be permitted instead of 30 mph as presently permitted. Your committee recommends no change.

This committee discussed informally the present 4-way STOP signs on New Madrid at Center and North Streets, and the merits of these present (temporary) 4-way STOP signs as against the automatic STOP-GO signal lights now removed for repairs; we are in agreement that if the present temporary signs were slightly lower and were reflectorized for better night-time vision, they may be better, and certainly would be for cheaper, regulatory signs than the automatic lights."

Missouri Basin Bill Approved by Congress

WASHINGTON AP -- Congressional action was completed Thursday on a bill authorizing the appropriation of $60 million for work on units of the Missouri River Basin program.

The Senate cleared the House-passed bill and sent it to the White House.

The bill would raise the authorization for spending on the series of dams along the Missouri to above $1 billion. It calls for appropriations of $60 million for use in the two fiscal years beginning July 1 on projects already under construction.

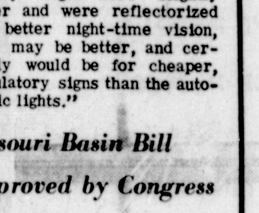

Reclamation Bureau engineers prpose to spend $27,270,000 in the two years on the Glen Elder project in Kansas.

The legislation calls for $12,694,000 for power transmission facilities throughout the basin, $6,559,000 for Yellowtail Dam in Montana, $2,652,000 for the Almena project in Kansas and smaller sums for other projects.

GENERAL BAPTIST CHURCH COVENANT

Having given ourselves to God, we now give ourselves to His church, and covenant with it and with each other as also with God- ---

1. That we will forsake all unrighteousness -- even the appearance of evil. We will abstain from all questionable pursuits and pleasures -- we will forego all hurtful habits -- we will avoid all evil associations; and we will "touch not, taste not, handle not" any unclean thing.

2. That we will follow earnestly after righteousness and true holiness, in the fear and love of God. We shall seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, trusting that all needful and helpful things will be added to us. We will seek entire consecration to God -- we will live a life of prayer -- we will seek the constant abiding of the divine life within us -- we will be satisfied only when we have the evidence that we please God and are accepted of Him.

3. That we will faithfully improve all the means of grace. We will attend and support the services of the church, the preaching, the social services, the business meetings. We will contribute freely of our means for the advancement of the gospel -- we will co-operate with our brethren in every enterprise having for its end the glory of God and the salvation of men.

4. That we will be Christ-like in all our deportment. We will be tender and affectionate toward each other -- we will be careful of each other's reputation -- thinking no evil and backbiting not with our tongues -- we will return good for evil -- we will be just and honest, truthful and honorable in all our dealings -- we will do unto others as we would be done by -- we will be meek, loving and forgiving, as we desire and hope to be forgiven.

5. That we will be faithful Christian workers. We will do whatever Christian work comes to hand, shunning no cross, shirking no duty. We will even seek opportunities to do good, glorify God and save souls. We will study to win our associates, our neighbors, our families, all whom we may influence to become Christians. We will count it more than our meat and our drink, more than all things else to do the will of our Father in heaven, to lead souls from sin and death and lead them to God and heaven.

Looking Back Over The Years

50 Years Ago
July 1, 1916

John Bragg, who has been playing first base on Sikeston ball team, left for St. Edwards, Neb., Wednesday where he will join another ball club.

Wheat harvest is underway in the Sikeston district. It will average about half a crop. The corn never looked better at this time of the year.

40 Years Ago
July 1, 1926

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Gervig and children left Monday for Belleville, Ill., where they will make their home.

30 Years Ago
July 1, 1936

Work was started Tuesday on a home Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Bowles are building on a lot at the corner of Vernon and College avenues.

Frankie Engram, C. D. Butler, and James Edward Butler will leave Sunday for the Southeast Missouri area Boy Scout camp on the St. Francis River, north of Greenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Pleas Malcolm have moved into their recently completed stucco bungalow on North Ranney.

20 Years Ago
July 1, 1946

Last year C. E. Felker offered to the State Highway Department a tract of land north of Benton to be known as the Clarence E. Felker Memorial Park. This week a letter was received in part as follows: The Commission at its regular meeting for May agreed to accept your generous offer of an area of three acres of land for a roadside park.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hoxworth of Morley are parents of a daughter born last Thursday at St. Francis hospital, Cape Girardeau.

Approximately 200 additional acres at Harvey Parks Airport together with the control tower and two large hangars have been leased from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by the city of Sikeston for use as a municipal airport. The city previously had leased 458 acres of the airport tract including one building known as the paint house, which gives the city control of practically all the tract of slightly over 700 acres with the exception of the barracks, hospital and administration buildings and the one big warehouse.

Response of the people of the Sikeston area has been enthusiastic to the Missouri Delta Community hospital drive. Solicitors are working to raise $160,000 in an area covered by a 25-mile radius of Sikeston.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 12-year-old girl who has a problem. It is my father. He does things that get me all mixed up. Here is what I mean:

Last night he yelled at me because I spilled a glass of lemonade on the living room floor and I didn't wipe it up very good. When he saw some small puddles here and there he got mad and called me a sloppy kid and ordered me to clean up the mess right.

I got some rags and started to wipe the stuff up when my dad came in the room with a mop. He dried my tears with his handkerchief and mopped up the floor for me.

This kind of thing happens all the time. I don't know if I should thank him for helping me or be mad at him for yelling at me. Please tell me what to think.--CRAZY MIXED UP KID

Dear Kid: Your dad is the one who has a problem. He feels guilty about hollering at you and then he tries to make nice kitty.

The next time your dad behaves this way, say to him, "Look dad, I deserved to get chewed out, so please don't confuse me by acting like YOU did something wrong."

Your letter is further evidence that it's getting tougher every day to bring up parents.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a serious problem and am turning to you for help -- like thousands of others.

I am 15 years old and just started to wear makeup. My mother is a real square and whenever she sees me with lipstick and mascara she gets mad and makes me take it off. My father, however, is a swell guy. He thinks makeup looks great on me. Please tell me what to do. -- FLOYD

Dear Floyd: You'd better take off the makeup, Hon, if you want to play on the football team. You dolls from Cal Tech could use some help out there on the field next season.

And now that you've written your fifth phony letter of the season will you please lay off and stop wasting my time?

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 26-year-old woman who has been married for five years. We have two fine sons and our marriage is a steady one.

My in-laws did not like me when I came into the family but I felt that in time they would see I was the right girl for their son and that gradually they would warm up to me. I tried awfully hard to be kind and considerate to them although they were always noticeably cool to me.

Last week my father-in-law casually remarked he was still not certain his son made the right choice when he selected me. I was dumbfounded and so was my husband. Neither of us replied.

Do you feel I should stop taking these insults in silence? I think perhaps I am stupid to just sit there and let my -in-laws abuse me. May I have your opinion? -- VERY HURT

Dear Hurt: You should NOT respond to these insults but your husband must have macaroni where his spine belongs for allowing such a remark to pass unanswered. It is your husband's place to tell his parents that HE is sure his choice was the right one.

Obviously he is unaware that it's HIS responsibility, so I suggest you inform him.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

THE PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

FRIDAY, JULY 1, 1966

Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted in me? hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him for the help of his countenance. (Psalm 42:5)

PRAYER: Loving Father, who from everlasting art God and whose being nothing can destroy, help us to trust in Thee when we cannot see. May we persevere in holding fast our faith amid difficulty. In Christ's name we ask. Amen.

Mental Health Unit Sponsors Workshops

KENNETT -- The Southeast Missouri Mental Health Association will serve as sponsor of sheltered workshop programs for the mentally retarded in Dunklin, Pemiscot and New Madrid Counties, it was announced Thursday by Troy Wilson of Kennett, association president.

Wilson said the decision to serve as sponsor for the sheltered workshop programs was made at the association's board of directors meeting, held this week at Hayti.

The workshop program envisioned by the association, Wilson said, is the extended employment workshop program which provides permanent employment for lower range educable and upper range trainable mentally retarded, as well as other handicapped persons.

Persons eligible for the workshop program must be 18 years or older, must have had some type of school training and have a productive work capacity in sheltered environment adapted to the abilities of the retarded, but whose limited capabilities make them non-employable in competitive business and industry and unsuited for vocational rehabilitation training.

Missouri's 1965 laws establishing the workshop program are designed to provide state aid in the organization and operation of extended employment workshops established by local non-profit community groups to provide employment opportunities for 30 per cent of the mentally retarded.

Wilson said the SEMO Mental Health Association is also making plans to establish another mental health clinic in the Bootheel, with the second unit to be located at the Pemiscot County Mental Health Center at Hayti. He said the opening of the second clinic would depend upon the availability of a psychiatrist from the Farmington State Hospital.

The association is currently seeking funds in the Bootheel to underwrite the cost of the clinic and to carry out educational and advisory programs in the Bootheel.

Individual Freedom And The Common Defence

by Walter Millis

The answer returned by the Supreme Court, in its various free speech decisions, turns upon the reality and urgency of the perils, whether of persuasion or of conspiracy, actually presented by the heretical or seditious belief. A free society may, indeed must, defend itself from genuine dangers arising from seditious teachings and disloyal beliefs. Whether the danger is that the enough minds to make possible a violent overthrow of our institutions by mob action, or whether it is that the disloyal faith will engender a dangerous infiltration of these institutions to distort their purposes and penetrate their secrets in the interests of a foreign power, makes no difference. There is quite obviously not the slightest present danger of violent overthrow as a result of the educational efforts of the Communist party or its schools and missionaries, yet the Court found that the party's conspiratorial activities were at least so dangerous that Congress could not, despite the First Amendment, be denied power to legislate against them by prohibiting (in the Smith Act) the teaching and advocacy of the Communist belief.

The true theoretical argument revolves, then around the reality of the peril--not the peril presented by specific Communist spies, saboteurs, or infiltrators, but the peril presented by the holding and teaching of the belief which presumably incites such persons to their acts. There is no question that this danger has been enormously exaggerated in the public mind by many forces, operating from many motives. The natural fears of the society as a whole engendered by a difficult and awesome international situation are by no means a complete explanation; these fears have received powerful reinforcement and exploitation from the pressures of personal ambition and partisan fury, from the tendency of the security officers and secret police to magnify their accomplishments and justify their function in society, from the reactions of those who see in Communism less a threat to the free society as a whole than to their own positions of power or profit, from the natural, if irrational, hatred which most men feel toward any heretical or non-conformist challenge. The dangers have been grossly exaggerated. Yet there is also little doubt that they are in some measure real. They are doubtless real enough to authorize some departure from the spirit of the First Amendment and the Jeffersonian principle that the civil authority may not "intrude his powers into the field of opinion." They are hardly real enough to authorize all the departures of the past few years. This has recently been increasingly recognized in court decisions and popular reactions. Yet the problem of just where and how to draw the dividing line remains; it is probably the most basic of all the issues which divide the devoted "anti-Communists" from the devoted "libertarians."

State Mental Units to Add Job Training

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — New vocational rehabilitation units will open today at the St. Joseph and Farmington state hospitals, to help train recovered mental patients and find jobs for them.

It is a joint effort by the Division of Mental Diseases and the vocational rehabilitation section of the Department of Education.

They were planned because of the success of a similar unit at the Nevada State Hospital. Joy O. Talley, head of vocational rehabilitation, said the Nevada unit placed 109 former mental patients in jobs during the past fiscal year.

The tentative budget for the St. Joseph facility will be $323,248 and for Farmington $336,680. Federal funds will amount to 75 per cent of the cost. Each unit will be staffed with counselors, social workers, psychologists and registered nurses.

At St. Joseph the unit will occupy part of a wing in the administration building and at Farmington part of one of the dormitory halls. Each will house up to 60 patients.

Cecil Brown, director of the Nevada unit, will come to Jefferson City to supervise the overall administration of the rehabilitation facilities at the three hospitals. He will be succeeded at Nevada by James L. Gonterman, who has been a psychiatric social worker there.

Meriell Sindt of Jefferson City will supervise the St. Joseph unit and Danny R. Alcorn of Cape Girardeau will direct the Farmington center. Both have been vocational rehabilitation counselors.

The units will simulate normal living conditions as much as possible and patients will be given an opportunity to work at jobs on the hospital grounds and in the commuuity to help them develop good attitudes and habits.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1898, Col. Theodore Roosevelt's "Rough Rider" regiment of volunteer cavalry charged across open fields against Spanish forces dug in atop San Juan Hill in Cuba during the Spanish-American War.

On this date

In 1924, daily air mail service was inaugurated between New York and San Francisco.

Ten years ago — Soviet Communist Chief Nikita Khrushchev was quoted in the Cairo press as asserting that Israel was seeking to maintain a state of tension in the Middle East to assure the continuance of Western Aid.

Five years ago — French President Charles de Gaulle made two speeches in Paris, calling for international and domestic peace.

One year ago — Communist North Viet Nam rejected a request by British Prime Minister Harold Wilson to permit a Western peace mission to visit Hanoi to talk about ending the Viet Nam war.

Famed Times Square Hotel Closes Doors

By JERRY BUCK

NEW YORK (AP) — The Hotel Astor, which has stood along gaudy Times Square like a maiden aunt for nearly 62 years, calls it quits today.

This morning her last 150 guests will check out, the 450 employes will leave their jobs, and the wrecking crew will take over. The Astor, a Broadway landmark, is coming down to make way for a 40-story office building.

"It's sad. Any passing is sad," said Erwin O. Schel, the hotel's general manager.

Henry Pottberg, the assistant bell captain, looked across the red-carpeted lobby and said, "The Astor's just out of this world. It's been like a second home to me. I've spent half of my life here."

For years the Astor was home to presidents and show business people. Every president since 1933 has stayed at the hotel, and once, according to a favorite Astor legend, a man went to sleep thinking he was president —and woke up a loser.

He was Charles Evans Hughes, who bedded down in the presidential suite in 1916 after hearing the favorable early returns. But during the night the California vote came in and put Woodrow Wilson in the White House.

The lobby of the Astor didn't look like a hotel on its last night. Guests still were checking in, and Schel said the hotel had to turn down hundreds of reservations that continued to pour in.

In the past 20 years New York has lost 33 hotels. On the same day the Astor closes, the Sheraton-East on Park Avenue also closes its doors. Nonetheless, New York has more hotel rooms now than it did in 1945 because of the new skyscraper hotels that have gone up—and the emergence of motor hotels in Manhattan.

Dr. Ralph Parker

New School Formed at M.U.

COLUMBIA, Mo., July 1 - Chancellor John W. Schwada announced today that the Board of Curators of the University of Missouri has established a School of Library Science effective July 1 and named Dr. Ralph Halstead Parker, University librarian since 1946, as its dean.

The new school which raises to 14 the number of divisions on the campus here, will represent an expansion of a present undergraduate library science curriculum to a full course of study offering a master's degree.

Chancellor Schwada said that the new division will have two primary goals, to train librarians to staff the rapidly expanding public school libraries and to offer instruction on new developments in library operation to prospective heads of larger public and private libraries.

Dr. Parker said that library school graduates are in great demand in the public school system, where library operations are being expanded to elementary school levels. At the same time, many of the older librarians are unfamiliar with newer developments in their field such as use of computers in library operations.

Under Dr. Parker, the University Library has moved into the computer field in a program that has attracted international attention. Dr. Parker believes that the University here is doing more in computer operation of libraries than all the other schools in the nation combined.

For the present the new school will be housed in the Library Building, where Dean Parker will have his office and where he will continue serving as university librarian until a successor is named.

His faculty at the moment consists of Francis J. Flood, assistant professor of library science, who has been chairman of the library science department which has been a part of the College of Arts and Science. Dean Parker said he expects to enlarge the faculty to five members as quickly as possible and to expand further as enrollment grows.

Dean Parker said that a start on the graduate program will be made during the fall semester opening in September, but that for the first year not enough courses will be offered in the master's program to produce a graduate by next June. The undergraduate program, which at present consists of 13 courses covering little more than two semesters of study plus eight related courses, will be continued, however, and some studies leading toward a master's degree will be inaugurated.

Dean Parker, native of Bertram, Tex., where he was born April 21, 1909, has Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts, and Doctor of Philosophy degrees he earned at the University of Texas between 1929 and 1935, and he spent a year as research fellow at the University of Chicago. He was with the University of Texas Library for six years, was librarian and associate professor of history at Pomona (Calif.) College for three, and directed University of Georgia libraries for six years, interrupted by a three-year assignment to the machine records branch of the adjutant general's office in the Army during World War II.

He is author of several publications on libraries and other topics and has written books on "Imperialism and the Liberation of Cuba" and "Punched Cards in Libraries."

As University librarian he supervised construction of the final wing to the half-century old Library Building and inaugurated the "open stack" method that permits free selection of books by students. With computers, records are kept on books checked out and rapid information is available on those overdue as well as a check on the flow and demand of the volumes.

With inauguration of the new school, the University here will have separate divisions headed by deans in fields of agriculture, arts and science, business and public administration, education, engineering, extension and community services, and veterinary medicine.

During hibernation, commonly known as winter sleep, some animals endure prolonged periods of cold. The body temperature does not conform to that of the air and may go down to a few degrees above freezing, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Looking Back Over The Years

50 Years Ago
July 1, 1916

John Bragg, who has been playing first base on Sikeston ball team, left for St. Edwards, Neb., Wednesday where he will join another ball club.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Young entertained with a dinner on June 7th, in honor of the first birth anniversary of their son, Harry, jr.

Wheat harvest is underway in the Sikeston district. It will average about half a crop. The corn never looked better at this time of the year.

40 Years Ago
July 1, 1926

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Gervig and children left Monday for Belleville, Ill., where they will make their home.

30 Years Ago
July 1, 1936

Work was started Tuesday on a home Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Bowles are building on a lot at the corner of Vernon and College avenues.

Frankie Engram, C. D. Butler, and James Edward Butler will leave Sunday for the Southeast Missouri area Boy Scout camp on the St. Francis River, north of Greenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Pleas Malcolm have moved into their recently completed stucco bungalow on North Ranney.

20 Years Ago
July 1, 1946

Last year C. E. Felker offered to the State Highway Department a tract of land north of Benton to be known as the Clarence E. Felker Memorial Park. This week a letter was received in part as follows: The Commission at its regular meeting for May agreed to accept your generous offer of an area of three acres of land for a roadside park.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hoxworth of Morley are parents of a daughter born last Thursday at St. Francis hospital, Cape Girardeau.

Approximately 200 additional acres at Harvey Parks Airport together with the control tower and two large hangars have been leased from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by the city of Sikeston for use as a municipal airport. The city previously had leased 458 acres of the airport tract including one building known as the paint house, which gives the city control of practically all the tract of slightly over 700 acres with the exception of the barracks, hospital and administration buildings and the one big warehouse.

Response of the people of the Sikeston area has been enthusiastic to the Missouri Delta Community hospital drive. Solicitors are working to raise $160,000 in an area covered by a 25-mile radius of Sikeston.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 12-year-old girl who has a problem. It is my father. He does things that get me all mixed up. Here is what I mean:

Last night he yelled at me because I spilled a glass of lemonade on the living room floor and I didn't wipe it up very good. When he saw some small puddles here and there he got mad and called me a sloppy kid and ordered me to clean up the mess right.

I got some rags and started to wipe the stuff up when my dad came in the room with a mop. He dried my tears with his handkerchief and mopped up the floor for me.

This kind of thing happens all the time. I don't know if I should thank him for helping me or be mad at him for yelling at me. Please tell me what to think.--CRAZY MIXED UP KID

Dear Kid: Your dad is the one who has a problem. He feels guilty about hollering at you and then he tries to make nice kitty.

The next time your dad behaves this way, say to him, "Look dad, I deserved to get chewed out, so please don't confuse me by acting like YOU did something wrong."

Your letter is further evidence that it's getting tougher every day to bring up parents.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a serious problem and am turning to you for help -- like thousands of others.

I am 15 years old and just started to wear makeup. My mother is a real square and whenever she sees me with lipstick and mascara she gets mad and makes me take it off. My father, however, is a swell guy. He thinks makeup looks great on me. Please tell me what to do. -- FLOYD

Dear Floyd: You'd better take off the makeup, Hon, if you want to play on the football team. You dolls from Cal Tech could use some help out there on the field next season.

And now that you've written your fifth phony letter of the season will you please lay off and stop wasting my time?

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 26-year-old woman who has been married for five years. We have two fine sons and our marriage is a steady one.

My in-laws did not like me when I came into the family but I felt that in time they would see I was the right girl for their son and that gradually they would warm up to me. I tried awfully hard to be kind and considerate to them although they were always noticeably cool to me.

Last week my father-in-law casually remarked he was still not certain his son made the right choice when he selected me. I was dumbfounded and so was my husband. Neither of us replied.

Do you feel I should stop taking these insults in silence? I think perhaps I am stupid to just sit there and let my in-laws abuse me. May I have your opinion? -- VERY HURT

Dear Hurt: You should NOT respond to these insults but your husband must have macaroni where his spine belongs for allowing such a remark to pass unanswered. It is your husband's place to tell his parents that HE is sure his choice was the right one.

Obviously he is unaware that it's HIS responsibility, so I suggest you inform him.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

THE PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

FRIDAY, JULY 1, 1966

Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted in me? hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him for the help of his countenance. (Psalm 42:5)

PRAYER: Loving Father, who from everlasting art God and whose being nothing can destroy, help us to trust in Thee when we cannot see. May we persevere in holding fast our faith amid difficulty. In Christ's name we ask. Amen.

Famed Times Square Hotel Closes Doors

By JERRY BUCK

NEW YORK (AP) — The Hotel Astor, which has stood along gaudy Times Square like a maiden aunt for nearly 62 years, calls it quits today.

This morning her last 150 guests will check out, the 450 employes will leave their jobs, and the wrecking crew will take over. The Astor, a Broadway landmark, is coming down to make way for a 40-story office building.

"It's sad. Any passing is sad," said Erwin O. Schel, the hotel's general manager.

Henry Pottberg, the assistant bell captain, looked across the red-carpeted lobby and said, "The Astor's just out of this world. It's been like a second home to me. I've spent half of my life here."

For years the Astor was home to presidents and show business people. Every president since 1933 has stayed at the hotel, and once, according to a favorite Astor legend, a man went to sleep thinking he was president—and woke up a loser.

He was Charles Evans Hughes, who bedded down in the presidential suite in 1916 after hearing the favorable early returns. But during the night the California vote came in and put Woodrow Wilson in the White House.

The lobby of the Astor didn't look like a hotel on its last night. Guests still were checking in, and Schel said the hotel had to turn down hundreds of reservations that continued to pour in.

In the past 20 years New York has lost 33 hotels. On the same day the Astor closes, the Sheraton-East on Park Avenue also closes its doors. Nonetheless, New York has more hotel rooms now than it did in 1945 because of the new skyscraper hotels that have gone up—and the emergence of motor hotels in Manhattan.

Swimming Class Starts Aug. 8

A swimming program will be held August 8-19 at the Sikeston swimming pool for school-age children of the Canalou-Matthews R-5 district and the Morehouse Delmo unit.

Lessons will be given from 9 to 11 a.m., with a period for play during the two hours.

A school bus will transport a limited number of children from the Canalou school at 8:25 a.m. and arrive back at Canalou at 11:45 a.m. Reservations on the bus can be made by calling NO 7-5547.

After the bus quota is filled, those children desiring to take lessons will have to provide their own transportation, it was reported.

On August 8 each child registering must present a $2 fee and the written signature of a parent permitting the child to attend. Those children who already have returned the parent's permission note are entitled to ride the bus.

This program is sponsored by the Canalou 4-H Club in cooperation with the Sikeston Jaycees. The bus transportation was secured through the Matthews R-5 school district in cooperation with DAEOC.

Volunteer instructors will be under the direction of Mrs. Glen Menz, Mrs. Paul Slinkerd Jr. and Bill Munger.
